Proof That the Soul Exists From $800 to $500,000 See the Great Race Found, a Monkey-Man

—By Arthur Brisbane—

A CENTURY OF PROGRESS EXPOSITION, Chicago, Ill., May 29—Men have asked often, "Have I really a soul?" That the soul exists was impressed upon many at the A Century of Progress Exposition Saturday night, when a blind man, Dr. Edwin B. Frost, director emeritus of Yerkes Observatory, attended the realization of the suggestion, made by him originally, that the light of the star Arcturus, Two hundred and twenty-five million million miles from the earth, be used to start earthly lights that flood the exposition buildings.

Exactly on time, 40 years after it left Arcturus, having travelled through the ether 225,000,000,000 miles, the light of the great star, feebler than that of a candle when it reaches the earth, was magnified and made to do its work.

If an astronomer, old and blind, can originate a magnificent experiment of this kind, if a Beethoven, stone deaf, can write and conduct his most magnificent symphony, you feel that there is something within the human brain not dependent on matter or time or any mere response to chemical or other reaction."

Do not fail to see Chicago's art exhibition at the Chicago Art Institute when you visit Chicago and the "A Century of Progress Exposition."

See the real "two headed baby" if you must, and the ladies trained to dance sidewise and wiggle, and all the wonders. But remember that art is long, time is fleeting. Everything else in the fair will be old, part of the past, when art will still be young.

There are no yearly models of Michelangelo.

Chauncey McCormack, chairman of Chicago's art committee, will receive this afternoon the only picture in the exhibit that comes from abroad. Whistler's famous picture of his mother. It comes from the Louvre in Paris, lent by the French government.

The portrait was painted in 1871, 62 years ago, exhibited in Chicago in 1880. Then it was for sale at $1200. No one bought it. Whistler exhibited it in Paris in 1883, and the French government bought it for 4000 francs, about $800. You could not buy the picture now for $500,000, and Chicago's art committee spends $5000 for transportation, insurance, etc., more than six times what it would have cost to buy it.

Visitors to the Chicago Exposition now can combine with their trip attendance at the Indianapolis 500-mile annual automobile race on Decoration Day.

Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, best fighting flier this nation has produced, telegraphs "the new racing rules will mean greater speed and safety in transportation; in this race, and in passenger cars later. Instead of carrying 40 to 50 gallons of gasoline, which means dangerously unbalanced cars when the gasoline becomes exhausted, only 15-gallon tanks will be permitted this year.

"Winning the race demands greater mileage in racing cars, which will be accomplished into economical operation for automobile buyers.

"The Indianapolis race is more than a test of speed and endurance, providing automotive engineers with thorough tests of advanced engineering ideas."

Captain Rickenbacker is interested in racing. That was his business before he went abroad and showed what he could do in the air.

Dayton, Tenn., discovers the skull of a prehistoric man, apparently connecting the human race with humble monkey-like ancestry. The skull likn that of "Pithecanthropus," a missing monkey-man, slopes straight back from the eye sockets, no forehead, the bones inside are ape-like, the jaw have human teeth worn square at the tops.

Pithecanthropus ate coarse food.

That ancient person selected the place of his death and burial tactlessly, for the famous Darwin monkey-trial took place at Dayton, where William Jennings Bryan defended man from the monkey stigma with Clarence Darrow defending the monkey relatives.

What would Darrow have given could that Pithecanthropus skull have been discovered and produced at the trial?

Sen. Glass Defies Threat From Bay State Man

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, May 29 (INS)—The life of Senator Carter Glass, former Secretary of the Treasury, has been threatened as a result of his clash with Ferdinand Pecora, special Senate counsel, at the inquiry into financial operations of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Glass has received a "half dozen threats" against his life, he said today. The threats sent by mail, were anonymous. He also received a number of what he called "blackguard telegrams" denouncing his attitude in the Morgan investigation.

THREAT FROM BAY STATE

One threat came from Massachusetts, Glass said, adding:

"No names were signed to the death threats but I had a blackguard telegram from a man in Massachusetts. I thought anyone with money enough to send a long telegram should be put on notice so I wrote in the margin of the telegram in blue pencil:

"'I am wasting a three-cent stamp to tell you I am not influenced by blackguard telegrams.' Then I mailed it back to him.

STOCKS AT NEW HIGH IN RALLY

New York, May 29—Pre-holiday profit-taking was easily absorbed in today's stock market and prices rallied after an early reaction had spent its force. Trading continued active.

Wheat was somewhat unsettled, but cotton more than canceling an early sag of about 80 cents a bale, and the May, 1934, future touched 10 cents a pound, a new high.

Wall Street commission houses had rather heavy selling orders on their books at the opening, most of which were in industrial shares. However, strong support was put behind oil, aviation, amusement and metal company issues and around noon the list again moved higher. In general, initial declines were more than recovered, putting scores of trading favorites into new high ground.

American Telephone, after dropping nearly $2 to $117.50, swung up to a new top. American Can's gain put it well across $85. Santa Fe Railway, Consolidated Gas of New York, Pennsylvania, New York Central and U. S. Steel advanced from a few cents to more than a dollar above Saturday's final prices.

Warner Bros., Loew's, United Aircraft, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Aviation Corp. rose around $1 each. Union Pacific, which had tumbled $3.50 to $108.50, got back most of its loss.

CURLEY GETS BIG U. S. JOB BY JUNE 10

President to Hand His Massachusetts Plums Out Next Week

Those appointments which Massachusetts Democrats have been awaiting since Roosevelt was inaugurated and which have been held up while the administration rushed through emergency measures, are going to materialize before June 10.

This was the good news circulated today in political circles here, brought back, it is understood, from Washington by high officials on recent visits—unofficially, of course.

Appointment of Mayor Curley to a high post in the Federal government is also due shortly, it is said, although perhaps not as soon as some of the lesser appointments.

In the past 10 days a number of disputes over choice Federal posts in this section have been ironed out, and the Massachusetts Federal plums will be among the first to be distributed.

Hugh Johnson to Head Public Works Jobs Plan

Washington, May 29 (AP)—Hugh S. Johnson, already slated to administer the extraordinary industrial control legislation, was named authoritatively today as also in line to direct its companion measure—the $3,500,000,000 public works-employment program.

It was said that—with approval of the administration—Johnson has chosen Donald Richberg, attorney for the Association of Railway Labor Executives as general counsel for the new agency.

Richberg was one of the foremost drafters of the bill, sitting with Johnson, Lewis W. Douglas, director of the budget, and Senator Wagner of New York at the final conferences which drew up the legislation for President Roosevelt's approval.

The importance with which Mr. Roosevelt views the legislation has been shown by the setting up of machinery to administer it, even before enactment, so vital action can be initiated within a few hours after he can sign it into law. An early Senate vote is being sought.

Coffey was sentenced on Sept. 25, 1931, to four to six years for assault with intent to murder. The third hearing, that of John Ford, sentenced in Suffolk on Dec. 12, 1930, to nine to 15 years for manslaughter, will be heard in State Prison June 13.

'NO QUARTER FOR MORGAN,' ROOSEVELT

President Orders Bank Probe Pushed; Backs Up Pecora's Fight

Washington, May 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt told members of the Senate banking committee today he wanted their investigation of J. P. Morgan & Co., and other private bankers to be pushed forward "without limit."

In an official source it was asserted that the President "renewed his expressed desire to have the investigation go through without limit, and indicated his complete confidence in the committee."

Members of the committee said they regarded this as an indication that the President was satisfied with the manner in which Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, has been conducting the investigation.

At the beginning of the investigation into private bankers, President Roosevelt gave the committee his backing and urged that the inquiry be thorough.

As a matter of fact, it was said today in an informed quarter, the President suggested to the committee at that time that its activities be turned toward the private bankers.

His present expression of confidence came after he had spent a week-end down the Potomac with Secretary Woodin, during which they discussed the inclusion of Woodin's name on the list of special clients who obtained stock from the Morgan house at bargain prices.

On his return to Washington last night Woodin told newspapermen he was not resigning.

America and Japan

THE following communication from William Randolph Hearst was published in the Japanese newspaper Yomiuri Shimbun of Tokyo. The communication from Mr. Hearst was written in response to a request from that newspaper for his views on "any important questions still unsettled between the United States and Japan.

San Simeon, Cal., May 22

Mr. Yasuo Fuwa,
New York Correspondent of Yomiuri Shimbun:
Answering your kind letter—

It seems to me that there are no important differences between the government of Japan and the government of the United States.

I would say, too, that there are absolutely no unfriendly sentiments among the people of the United States towards the people of Japan.

There is, to be sure, a regret that the differences between Japan and China should have resulted in war and a fear that such wars may spread and again involve other nations in a world war.

But I would say that the best way to keep these wars from spreading is for other nations to keep out of them.

Moreover, it is difficult for distant nations to determine accurately and justly the causes of the war.

There is, to my mind, at the base of this war, more than the conflict between a militarist nation and pacifist one.

There is, fundamentally, the conflict between a progressive nation and a reactionary one.

There must be something essentially antiquated or impractical in the ideals and methods of a nation of three hundred million people if they cannot sustain their ideals and practises in peaceful competition or warlike conflict with a nation of sixty million.

It is the first duty of any nation to defend, and to be able to defend, its ideals and its institutions, and if China or the United States or any nation falls short in this prime obligation to society and civilization, it must take the bitter consequences.

Pacifism is not always a virtue. It is sometimes an indication of the lack of vigor and virtue. It is too often an evidence of spiritual deterioration and national decay.

Progress through the ages has been made by those peoples who have been willing to lay down their lives for their ideals.

ROOSEVELT WILL KEEP WOODIN AT HELM OF TREASURY

SECRETARY MAY RETIRE AFTER EMERGENCY, HE INDICATES

Washington, May 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt is going to keep William H. Woodin in the Treasury despite the clamor for his ouster since his name was found on a list of J. P. Morgan & Co.'s preferred customers.

Furthermore the President intends to keep intact his whole official family, cabinet and assistants, to administer the unparalleled powers conferred on him and them to combat the economic emergency.

Mr. Roosevelt views the immediate future as the crucial time as far as the government's own anti-depression steps go. He trusts his present aides to administer the vast regulation or control of industry, business, railroads, banking and agriculture which is gradually being forged, and he does not want to make shifts.

All this, and specifically the news on Mr. Woodin developed at the end of Mr. Roosevelt's week-end cruise down the Potomac, during which the two held earnest converse.

As he stepped ashore, Woodin was met by newspapermen, who had just one question. He answered them:

"I have not resigned."

It did not take long to learn that he had not been "fired" either, and was not going to be.

The smiling, polite-shy Woodin was not inclined to argue his case nor to ask support.

It was quite clear he had made known to it. President that if his continuance in the Treasury would hinder the definite upward swing of affairs which he believes to be in progress, or might diminish public confidence, he was willing to return to his own affairs.

There was also an intimation that when the Morgan inquiry is ended and the public is ready to pass judgment, he is going to make a statement. Many others were on the Morgan preferred lists, but for the most part, like Woodin, they were not at the time in government service.

MAY QUIT LATER

The view of observers here is that Mr. Woodin intends to resign as soon as he feels he has served his part in the emergency and that meantime Mr. Roosevelt is standing by him as a friend.

Woodin was emphatic last night about his confidence in the business pickup. He said:

"All lines of business and trade are improving. It is a real thing. It is everywhere. Farmers are feeling better. The people are spending money. There is confidence."

R. F. C. SLASHES EXECUTIVES

Washington, May 29 (AP)—Without waiting for enactment of pending legislation, the Reconstruction Finance Corp. has decreed that corporations coming to borrow from the government must cut the salaries of their executives to reasonable figures.

The new policy, announced last night, actually went into effect last week on the Southern Pacific, given loans totalling $25,200,000, on condition that salaries above $100,000 be reduced 60 per cent and others proportionately.

A bill now nearing passage in Congress originally barred from borrowing all companies paying salaries above $17,500, but it was amended to require that the earnings of executives must be reasonable.

The R. F. C. scale for the Southern Pacific provides 50 per cent cuts between $100,000 and $50,000; 40 per cent from $50,000 to $25,000; 25 per cent from $25,000 to $15,000; 15 per cent from $15,000 to $10,000 and 10 per cent for those receiving down to $4,800 a year. Wages of railroad labor are not affected.

STORM THRILLS ROOSEVELTS

Washington, May 29 (INS)—The presidential family was still talking today about the severe electrical and wind squall the White House yacht Sequoia rode out Saturday night on the broad expanse of the Potomac river.

There was general agreement that the 100 foot craft had demonstrated she was fully seaworthy, for at least "river work." The storm was the highlight of President Roosevelt's week-end excursion.

"It was as bad a thunderstorm as I have ever seen," said Capt. Walter Vernon, naval aide to the President, who was aboard.

President Roosevelt himself is a veteran yachtsman, and one of his guests was Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, but the elements gave the "landlubbers" aboard—including Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Woodin, quite a thrill.

LUCE BATTLES GOLD REPEAL

Washington, May 29 (INS)—Repeal of the gold clause in government and private bonds is necessary because of the tendency to hoard gold and a like tendency for capital to leave the country the House banking committee declared in a report filed today on the administration's bill taking the country off the gold standard by law.

The situation makes it impossible for the government to carry out its constitutional duty to create a currency and determine the value, said the report which was written by the Treasury Department.

With chairman Steagall (D.) of Alabama, planning to call up the bill in the House today Rep. Luce (R.) of Massachusetts, filed a minority report in which he declared the gold clause repeal bill should be known as "The repudiation bill of 1933."

MORE LISTS COMING

The Morgan investigation will be resumed Wednesday, with Pecora probably making public another list of the Morgan "favored clients" who were handed choice securities at sub-market prices.

Three more lists will be made public revealing similar Morgan largess in Utility Corporation, General Motors and Johns-Manville stocks.

Pecora will complete the utility phase of Morgan's holdings. After that, he will show how Morgan gained control of trade-marked food products by creating Standard Brands, Inc., a holding corporation for owning securities of Food Product Corporations. A like picture of Morgan's interest in the automobile industry will be revealed through his reorganization of General Motors. Then there will be fresh revelations of Morgan's handling of international loans.

U. S. FOR DEBT TRUCE-HERRIOT

Paris, May 29 (AP)—Edouard Herriot, who served as France's special envoy for President Roosevelt's economic discussions in Washington, declared before the chamber of deputies today that the President desired three truces—on Tariffs, Debts and Armaments.

M. Herriot informed Premier Daladier that Mr. Roosevelt had insisted on payment of the $19,000,000 war debt interest defaulted by France last December before negotiations could be opened on the entire debt question.

A full report on his Washington discussions was made by M. Herriot. The chamber was packed.

Premier Daladier revealed that a request for a moratorium on the $40,000,000 debt payment due June 15 and for revision negotiations had been included in the instructions to M. Herriot before he went to Washington. These points were advanced by France as conditions to the payment of the installment due last December.

500 Psychiatrists Here Tackle 22-Letter Word to Aid You

Words like thyroparathyroidectomy and amolytic activity, which don't mean much to you, but which may have a vital effect on your reason, echoed through the Hotel Statler today. Nearly 500 psychiatrists from all over the world gathered for the 89th annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

Today's activities were confined to registration and a session of the conference on epileptic diseases—that's fits.

The meeting opens tomorrow with Dr. James V. May of Boston in the president's chair. Addresses of welcome will be made by Mayor Curley and prominent Boston physicians.

The session will last until Friday, with daily papers, excursions and visits to Massachusetts institutions scheduled. A meeting of the American Association for the Study of the Feebleminded is also scheduled.

Hope of lowering the number of fits suffered by any particular epileptic patient was held out by D.. W. G. Lennox at the morning session of the epileptic conference.

An analysis of the blood of 1500 non-institutional epileptic patients has led to new discoveries of the methods of dealing with fits, Dr. Lennox said.

SCHACHT FEARS GOLD CRISIS

Berlin, May 29 (INS)—Germany will meet her private obligations, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, declared today at the opening session of the German creditors' "transfer conference."

Schacht made his statement before 40 bankers from all parts of the world attending the conference. Those present included Albert Henry Wiggin, American representative.

Schacht pointed out, however, that what he called the "gold foreign exchange situation" was most critical, and that it necessitated a change in transfer methods.

Schacht, whose reputation as a south-sayer on economic affairs is little short of phenominal, reported that Germany would be stripped of all gold foreign exchange by January, 1934, if she continues to service her obligations as she has done heretofore.

NUDIST CULT SWEEPING U. S. WITH LARGEST COLONY HERE

Arch Moralist, Rev. J. S. Sumner, Aids Huntington, Boone

By LEIGH MATTESON
International News Service Writer

New York, May 29 (INS)—Under the leadership of two ex-clergymen, whose activities have the full approval of that arch-moralist, Dr. John S. Sumner, secretary of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, nudist converts have sharply increased this year in the United States.

An extensive investigation of the movement toward the practice of nakedness by adults and children of both sexes, indoors and outdoors, has just been completed by International News Service.

It was discovered there are several hundred new nudist organizations in the country. Under their auspices thousands of new members have been enrolled at the beginning of this third season of nudism in America.

RICH NUDIST COLONY HERE

About ten new members an hour were being enrolled at each office of the organizations with camps and gymnasiums in or near this city.

Responsibility for the sharp increase of public interest in nudism this year must go to the two former clergymen, Dr. Henry Strong Huntington and Dr. Ilsley Boone.

Dr. Huntington, a former Presbyterian minister, and Dr. Boone, a former Baptist divine, are associated in the operation of one of the largest and most exclusive nudist camps in the East, which occupies a 300-acre tract near Otis, Mass.

Only professional and business people, with considerable incomes, can afford entrance fees and charges to this camp. Membership fees alone range from $20 for a week-end to $1000 for a life membership.

Discovery that the two ex-clergymen and a number of doctors of philosophy, lawyers, psychologists and business men were promoting or practicing nudism led this writer to join several nudist groups at camps and gymnasiums to obtain direct, factual information.

WHERE FARLEY RULES

One of the camps at which the nudists were observed at rest and play is in Rockland County, New York, where Thomas Farley, brother of Postmaster General James A. (Jim) Farley, is sheriff.

Another camp, with one of the largest attending memberships, is a few miles across the Hudson river from Hyde Park, ancestral home of President Roosevelt. Nudist camps are located in Westchester County, nearby New Jersey and Connecticut.

Data also were obtained on new camps in Philadelphia, Chicago, Texas and California.

In the interest of the enterprise and in behalf of the cult of nudism, Dr. Huntington, a former owner of the Huntington Aircraft Corp., and Dr. Boone organized this year the international nudist conference, under which nudist organization is promoted throughout the country. Headquarters of the conference are in this city.

Under auspices of the conference, they then started publication this month of an illustrated magazine devoted to the promotion of nudism, the interests of nudists and the Surgoyne Trail Associates, operators of the colony at Otis, Mass.

THEY GOBBLE IT UP

In order to forestall banning the publication from the newsstands and from the mails, Drs. Huntington and Boone sent an intermediary to Dr. Sumner with proofs of the articles and photographs they proposed to publish.

After Sumner's inspection the magazine went to press. It contained 27 separate photographs of individual nudists and groups of nudists engaged in varied activities.

An edition of 20,000 copies of "The Nudist" was run off and distributed throughout the nation. The edition sold out so quickly that additional copies were printed, until about 40,000 copies in all were distributed. The first edition of the second issue, out this week, will be 50,000 copies.

Public reaction to the first issue was immediate. Nudist organizations were swamped with telephone and mail inquiries, and new groups began at once to apply at the conference offices for organization information and literature on camp and gymnasium regulations.

SHOOT TO KILL ORDER IN GUSTIN GANG KILLING ROUNDUP

Gustin gang guns roared and "Red" Curran, who "squealed" on two members of the gang and sent them to State Prison for long terms, paid the price. Two suspects, John "Bullet" Falvey, a former Boston policeman, and Harold E. Daley, were arrested within 13 hours of the time Curran's bullet-riddled corpse was found on the bottom of a 128-foot quarry hole in West Quincy. Six others are hunted, among them Steve Gustin, the gang's leader, and Francis P. Sullivan, his bodyguard. Daley is shown above in custody of Sergt. Conaty as he was taken in for the police lineup in headquarters today.

'NO BABIES' FOR 'NINI' WITHOUT MATE'S LOVE

Sister-in-Law's Testimony Ends Evidence, Decision Wednesday

Newport, R. I., May 29—Without hearing Mrs. Louise Biles, of Birmingham, Ala., announced "surprise witness" and "contact" woman for F. Frazier Jelke, 32-year-old Wall Street broker, in procuring witnesses for his suit against his 28-year-old wife, Mrs. Eugenia "Nini" Jelke, taking of testimony in the double-barreled divorce action suddenly ended in Newport County court this afternoon.

Court was adjourned until Wednesday morning when arguments by opposing counsel will be heard.

Judge Walsh said that upon completion of arguments Wednesday he would immediately start writing his decision in the form of a rescript and it would be read from the bench either Wednesday or Thursday morning in Newport.

JELKE DENIES ATTACK

Appearing in rebuttal, just before the end of the evidence, Mr. Jelke denied that he ever had threatened to buy up witnesses if Mrs. Jelke insisted upon contesting his divorce suit. He also denied ever having struck his wife, as she charged on the witness stand.

Mrs. Bartholomay Jelke, the former Marjorie McVickar of New York and Newport, testified that in 1931, when she herself was going to have a child, Mrs. Eugenia Jelke told her that she did not want children "If I don't love my husband."

BEACH CLUB "SCARE"

She said she married Bartholomay Jelke in 1931, when he was a sophomore at Yale and she met Mrs. Eugenia Jelke shortly after the latter's marriage in December, 1930.

At the Atlantic Beach Club in New York in September, 1931, she testified, she was with Mrs. Jelke when a message came that there was a long distance telephone call for Mrs. Jelke. She said that Mrs. Jelke remarked:

"What will I say if it's Frazier?"

Mr. Jelke was then in Chicago. When Mrs. Jelke returned from answering the call, the witness said, she remarked:

"My God, I was so scared. Thank God it wasn't Frazier."

There had been previous testimony in the case that Mrs. Jelke went to the Atlantic Beach Club against the wishes of her husband.

DISPUTES MRS. HARTMAN

Miss Marie Kraemer was recalled to the stand to deny that representatives of Mr. Jelke paid Mrs. Ethel Hartman, of Birmingham, Ala., $5200 for expenses to appear as a witness in the case. She said that Mrs. Hartman, in her apartment, it is charged, Mrs. Jelke was seen with a man known as "The Major," received $1250 and then failed to appear in the case for Mr. Jelke.

Last week Mrs. Hartman appeared for Mrs. Jelke and testified that she never saw Mrs. Jelke in the Birmingham apartment.

Miss Kramer said that she showed Mrs. Hartman photographs of Mrs. Jelke and that Mrs. Hartman identified the pictures as those of the woman who was in her apartment with "The Major."

She also testified that on May 1 last, just before the case came up for trial, Mrs. Hartman demanded $5000 to appear as a witness.

Katherine Humphies, 17-year-old Bennington, Vt., high school senior, missing several weeks and found in Detroit, ridicules the charge that David McCracken, 35-year-old wedded auto mechanic, kidnaped her, "I went with him willingly," she said.

LYA DE PUTTI'S DAUGHTER WINS HER SUITOR

Film Star Spurns Rich Tea Man, Then He Woos Girl, 18

Budapest, Hungary, May 29 (INS)—The beautiful 18-year-old daughter of Lya De Putti, German film star, has become engaged to a former admirer of her mother, according to gossip in fashionable circles here today.

The swain is G. E. R. Grootenboer, rich Dutch tea-grower from Java, who arrived on Friday and proceeded to Gibart in North Hungary, where Miss De Putti's daughter, Judith Szepessy, lives in her grandmother's cottage.

Gossip has it that the journey produced immediate results and that he proposed and was accepted, though the date of marriage has not yet been fixed.

Grootenboer is said to have fallen in love with the mother of his bride-to-be in Hollywood in 1929. This romance, however, apparently died quickly when she rejected his proposal.

Immediately he wrote the girl a love-letter and then flew to Budapest without even awaiting a reply.

Detroit, May 29 — Katherine Humphries, 17-year-old Bennington, Vt., High School senior, found here after a two weeks' international search, today came to the defense of her married sweetheart, David McCracken, 35, who is charged with kidnaping her.

"I've known Dave for ten years, and we've been sweethearts for more than a year," she said, "I went away with him willingly, and I have been happy with him. We planned to get married as soon as David could get a divorce."

The girl had been sought throughout the East and in Canada following her disappearance. McCracken left his Kennington wife and home at the same time and the girl's father swore out a warrant for his arrest.

"The charge of kidnaping is silly," Katherine said.

The girl and boy were arrested here in McCracken's car. They were living here and McCracken was working in an auto plant.

At the Eustis School, Custodian John Murphy found the rear door had been forced open. Inkwells had been thrown about the rooms and the contents of fire extinguishers squirted on the walls.

Two Roxbury lads, one six and the other seven, had the idea of setting fires in the Aaron Davis school, but the idea was better than the fires and the children had to go to school today, anyway.

They didn't get to school, however, until police questioned them and obtained a confession.

Several other girl office workers were recognized and chased. Strikers claimed they are trying to get to work the machines and that strikebreakers are being smuggled in by boat.

Police reserves were rushed to the scene and clashed with the crowd, which this time was not smashing mill windows with stones, after failing in an effort to force their way through the gates.

Motorcycle Officer William O'Neil and other officers were struck and slightly injured. Union leaders blamed radicals, some of them from Boston, for the outbreak

To the surprise of the board and the crowd that attended the hearing, O'Neill was revealed as a deaf mute whose "words" on his fingers were translated into words by an interpreter.

John J. McCarthy, representing ex-Senator James J. Mellen and others, opposed the permit. McCarthy argued that O'Neill wanted it for his brother, James O'Neill, who, he charged, had formerly conducted a liquor nuisance in Chelsea at

Capt. William Livingstone, formerly in charge of the Charlestown district, said James O'Neill was never convicted of violating the liquor laws, and refused to become involved in a argument with McCarthy and Charles S. Sullivan, Jr., counsel for O'Neill. He asked to be excused when the lawyers began to wrangle over the alleged record of James O'Neill, but was forced to remain.

CURRAN, GUSTIN HANGER-ON, PAID WITH LIFE FOR 'SQUEAL'

By THE MASKED REPORTER

(Copyright, 1933, by the Boston Evening American.)

Never a member of the inside circle of Gustin gangsters Curran didn't know the underworld code that demands tight-lipped silence. He was just a homeless boy without kin. The Gustins let him warm his heels in the Vinton st. speak where Patrolman Dan McDonald was beaten almost to death last January.

He traded his services as a handy man for drinks of sky split, a few sandwiches and a bunk in the rear room. Just an amiable sort of kid who never got into serious trouble. Hardly able to punch his way out of a paper bag according to the classification of his hoodlum bosses.

One night he saw his bosses inflict a horrible beating on Patrolman McDonald, who had dropped into the speakeasy on his day off. What Curran witnessed that night was enough to mark him for death.

The police squeezed him for details and Red gave it to them with never a thought of the consequences. He testified against Tony Dambrowski and "Fagot" Dineen in Suffolk Superior Criminal Court later and his testimony resulted in long prison terms for both gangsters.

Red talked freely of the part played by Stevie "Gustin" Wallace and Frank Sullivan in the murderous assault upon the patrolman. How Stevie, his chief boss, poured the knockout drops into the glass of McDonald helpless and then assisted in the beating along with Sullivan.

THROUGH SQUAWKING

Red went in Plymouth jail for safe-keeping after his testimony. Police knew he stood a better chance of living there. But after a few days' prison life palled on the boy. Steve Gustin and Sullivan were still at large but that didn't seem to bother Red much. He preferred to get out and take his chances. He was all through squawking.

He said publicly he'd never testify against Stevie or Sullivan. So they hailed him out for the original time advice of the police and Red went out of jail with a smile on his lips.

But he promised Sergt. James Crowley he'd keep in touch. Let him know where he was and with whom he was associating. The police wrote Red's name in indelible ink on every article of clothing they bought for him and sorrowfully bade him adieu.

AT N. H. CAMP

That was six weeks ago. For a week or two Red was out frolicking with the Gustins. They say he met Stevie in New York, and agreed over a bottle of rye that he'd never "turn stool" in court.

But Red made the mistake of keeping his promise to Sergeant Crowley. Everywhere he went he'd write or telephone Crowley all about it. The sergeant wanted to protect the kid as long as possible, though he knew weeks ago that Red's chances of remaining alive were mighty slim.

Such close contact with the cops didn't fit very well, however, with the Gustins' idea of underworld etiquette. They wined and dined Red and paid his board and room rent in various spots, but they felt he was backsliding in the common cause—namely to fix things up for Stevie's return to Boston.

DEATH DRIVER UNKNOWN

The gangsters' patience was about exhausted when they invited Red to stay up in Webster, N. H., a few weeks at their expense. They warned him that it would be a nasty thing to tell the cops he went there. They said all fed up on Red's correspondence.

Red agreed to break off his contact with Sergt. Crowley once he became installed in Constable George H. Fairbanks' boarding house in the little country town. He took the name of Murphy, though all his clothing was marked "Thomas Curran."

Harold E. Daley, 37, of Dorchester drove Curran from Boston in the Fairbanks home three weeks ago. Because of that ride Daley was under arrest today on suspicion of murder. Who drove Curran back from New Hampshire to the Quincy quarry where his bullet-ridden body was found yesterday nobody seems to know at this moment.

The quiet of the little town of Webster got on Red's nerves after a little while. He strolled the main street by day and picked up a few acquaintances among the friendly farming folk.

But at night he was all alone with the haunting fear that death was drawing ever closer. In a sudden panic of horror the lad grabbed a telephone and called Sergeant Crowley.

"I'm in Webster," he said. "At Constable Fairbanks house under the name of Murphy. For God sake come up and talk to me."

Crowley went up to talk with him the next day—May 18.

The Gustins knew about the visit the next day. That was the day they planned his death.

SOUTH SHORE TRIP HIS LAST

Three men went up in an auto from Boston May 21. They arrived at Constable Fairbanks' house at 7:30 p. m. One stepped out of the car, rapped on the constable's door and asked for Murphy.

Curran went out for a few minutes. Came back and packed two grips and left with the three. Constable Fairbanks two weeks' board. The constable didn't complain. Curran had told him his story several days before.

The killers told Red they were going to take him to a nice place on the South Shore for the summer. Red was apparently willing to go.

They found him on the rim of the South Shore, in a water-filled quarry, his flaming red hair streaked with blood from three bullet wounds. Beside him were the two cheap suitcases crammed with clothes the police had bought him and carefully stencilled "Thomas G. Curran."

JAP SWORDFISH BILL REJECTED

A bill designed to protect the Massachusetts fishing industry against inroads made by the importation of Japanese swordfish was today returned to the legislature by Governor Ely without his approval.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Harold B. Wallace of Gloucester, would prohibit swordfish from being placed in cold storage if caught more than 120 days prior to being placed therein.

"This is an attempt," the Governor declared in his message, "to accomplish by indirection what could not be accomplished directly. It will not get to the advantage of Massachusetts fishermen because there is nothing to prevent the prohibited fish from sale in neighboring states, where they may be used either for re-sale in Massachusetts or in the neighboring markets with an effect wholly detrimental to our own swordfish industry."

Curran's Only Body in Quarry Hole, Diver's Search Shows

"There is no girl's body in the pots or near the spot where Thomas "Red" Curran, slain gangster, was found by me in the bottom of Dyer's quarry pit, in Quincy.

This was the statement of Fred Wallace, deep sea diver, who dropped 125 feet beneath the surface of an abandoned quarry hole to bring back the body of Thomas Red Curran.

Wallace, today, described in detail his descent into the quarry and what he saw beneath the surface of the water.

"On Friday afternoon Lieut. Joseph Avery called me and outlined his theory that he believed a murder had been committed at Dyer's quarry.

"Yesterday I went to the quarry in Quincy and prepared to descend. When I was lowered from the raft I went quickly to the bottom, which is solid rock and I might say surprisingly clear of debris.

"I figured out before I went down where the machine, if one went over, should have been and luckily, when I reached the bottom I landed within 20 feet of the car.

"Looking inside I found a cushion floating and I removed it and looked it over carefully. I found a large slash in the seat and I think it is a front cushion.

"I went back to the machine and found the two suit cases and sent them up on a line.

"On my second descent I came along close to another machine. It was a 1927 model small type car. I did not look inside this machine, but I will examine it thoroughly today.

"I walked around the Curran death car for an hour when I suddenly noticed about 30 feet toward the shore the body of Curran. He was lying face down, one arm under his body. I could see when I turned him over that he had been badly marked up and I tied the line on him and sent him to the surface.

"Reports that I saw the body of a girl nearby are untrue.

saulted by the Gustins last January. The testimony of Curran, whose body was found in a Quincy quarry hole yesterday, sent two of the Gustins to prison for long terms and threatened to do the same for Stephen Wallace, fugitive leader of the gang, and Frank Sullivan, his missing lieutenant.

McDonald alone remains to testify, as a result of Curran's murder. He is broken in health, crippled for life by the assault and a pitiable shadow of his former self. Supt. Crowley ordered a night and day guard over his home.

Riot gun squads combed Dorchester, South Boston and South End for a half dozen gangsters and hoodlums wanted for questioning in connection with the murder of Curran.

The three men arrested all live in Dorchester and all are connected with the Gustin gang, police allege. They are John H. Falvey, 44, former policeman, Harold E. Daley, 37, alleged speakeasy proprietor, and Henry Coogan 30, who has a long police record.

Daley and Coogan, according to Daley's own admission, were the men who drove Curran from Boston to Webster, N. H. where he went into hiding a month ago.

FALVEY'S AUTO

It was a car registered in Falvey's name, but believed owned by Stephen and Jimmy Wallace, in which Curran was taken from Webster a week ago last night by three men, driven to Quincy, placed in another car, shot, and buried over a 60-foot ledge into 20 feet of water.

Falvey's car was found in a shed in the rear of 1270 Columbia rd., South Boston. It was seized by police and examined for finger-prints.

Police squads, under orders to shoot to kill if Stephen Wallace or Sullivan are located, combed gangland haunts in South Boston, South End and Dorchester.

Boston detectives, 100 strong, were mobilized for the hunt and ordered to "bring them in on stretchers or cold up."

The first arrests took place at 3:45 a. m., less than 12 hours after Curran's bullet-riddled body had been brought up from the Quincy quarry hole.

At that hour, Boston police with shotguns and tear gas surrounded the home of Daley, in Train st., Dorchester, and took Daley into custody, without resistance.

A short time later they arrested Falvey, in his Edison Green home. Coogan, a former Boston policeman, discharged in 1917 for being drunk, He was drunk today.

Sergt. James V. Crowley and Special Officer Thomas Conaty led a special detail which, after the arrests of Daley and Falvey, continued the search in South Boston, Dorchester and South End.

FOR HIDDEN IN CAR

Although Falvey is alleged to be the registered owner of an automobile in which Curran was taken last Saturday from the farm in Webster, N. H., where he was in hiding awaiting the search for Wallace and Sullivan, the car actually is owned by Wallace, police say.

One man, whom Curran thought was his friend, was at the wheel of the car, while a second, whom he would have recognized as an enemy, was hidden on the floor when "Red" stepped into the machine for what he thought was a friendly "airing," police have established.

They say they know the identity of the two men. Curran, they believed, was driven directly to Quincy after being transferred to a stolen car. The car and the plates for it had been stolen that day, and the plan to "bury" Curran in the quarry pit, where it was believed he never would be found, had long been formed.

Daley's suspected part in the crime was not revealed. Police have considerable information they are keeping secret. He was taken from his sobbing wife and four-year-old child.

Daley's wife appeared first when police demanded admittance to Daley's duplex home in the quiet Dorchester neighborhood. With guns drawn and clad in bullet-proof vests, they gained admittance and found Daley in a bedroom.

"You're not surprising me. I've been expecting you fellows," Daley was quoted by Inspector Conaty.

"Well, you're in hot water this time," replied Conaty.

Daley dressed while his wife and the child who had been awakened by the invasion of police clung to him. His first act at his home was to exhibit a large sum of money, which police advised him to leave with his wife.

After booking at police headquarters on a charge of "suspicion of murder of Thomas Curran" Daley was placed under grilling of Inspector John C. McCarthy of the homicide squad.

Because police have determined that Curran was slain on the edge of the quarry in which his body was found, Daley was held for police of Quincy.

SLAYER KNOWN

Conaty had just returned from Webster, N. H., with Sergt.-Inspector James V. Crowley when the fast trip was made in Dorchester. Sergt. Crowley took another squad to South Boston, but the man he sought could not be found in his usual haunts.

Police revealed that they were not holding Daley as the actual murderer of Curran.

"But the arrest of Daley is practically a cleanup. We know the actual murderer and will arrest him very soon," Inspector Conaty said.

Daley drove Curran to the home of George H. Fairbanks, town constable, at Webster, where Curran took refuge under the name of "Mike" Murphy, police said.

A short time before, Curran failed to heed police warnings and allowed himself to be hailed from Plymouth jail, to which he was sent as a material witness and as protection against gang vengeance.

They said Daley had no police record but was known to them as a partner of James Wallace, brother of the sought Stephen Wallace.

CHALLENGE TO ALL

At roll call this morning, 100 detectives viewed Falvey and Daley. Falvey chewed the end of a dead cigar and was unsteady on his feet. He said he hadn't worked. Daley said he never worked. Lieut.-Inspector Donovan asked him where he got money and he said he received government compensation. He said he had been sending Curran $10 a week.

The suspects were jailed in two special cells in the headquarters basement while Inspector Donovan addressed the detectives.

"This Curran murder is a challenge to the Boston police department," he said. "When gangsters take a police witness and murder him they are defying the entire department and as long as they can get away with it we might as well fold up.

"It's up to you to find out where Wallace and Sullivan are. Many of you have connections in the underworld. It's up to you to locate them.

"Remember, if they get you fellows in a tight spot it will be just too bad for you. I advise you to get Sullivan and Wallace and bring them in on stretchers."

Daley was dressed in dapper style. He was reported as a man of 170 pounds, 5 feet 8 inches in height and a salesman by occupation.

INFORMED KILLER

One of the men in the car that took Curran from Webster, N. H., is believed to have been an informer for police. Police described him as 35 years old, five feet, nine inches tall, 160 pounds, wearing a black moustache.

He was at the wheel of the Falvey-Gustin Chevrolet, 471-681, into which Curran was forced on the road for a ride.

Meanwhile at the edge of the Quincy quarry pole from which Diver Fred Wallace yesterday recovered Curran's body, preparations were under way for further recovery of the suspected stolen Buick in which he was shot and buried.

Diver Wallace went down to seek glass and other parts which might have a record of fingerprints, also to hunt for the murder gun, suspected to have been buried into the pit. Later he was to attempt attaching chain slings so an effort could be made to haul the car out.

About 2000 persons gathered on the brink of the ledge to watch his descent. He planned a thorough search of the bottom for anything bearing upon the crime. There are two other old Ford cars in the hole, he reported to police, but they are believed to have no connection with the murder. They may have been dumped there in insurance frauds.

The last report of Curran in official circles was a week ago Saturday when he left the Fairbanks home at Webster over the protest of three men in a Massachusetts car.

Three days before the departure, Curran had been visited by Sergt. Crowley and Inspector Conaty at a point in New Hampshire. Police believe that Curran was being watched and that the meeting with police indicated that he planned to accept the gang's protection at the same time that he planned to testify against the two men still sought for the McDonald assault.

Constable Fairbanks said he found Curran's name on some of his clothing and when he queried him about the use of the name Murphy, Curran frankly told him that he was in hiding as a witness in a Boston case.

When Curran's suitcase was found in the car that hurtled from the Quincy cliff to the bottom of Dyer's quarry, off Quarry st., Quincy, the clothing was folded as though by one who was a careful packer.

Curran's body was riddled with five .32 calibre bullets, it was revealed after Diver Fred Wallace brought the body to the surface from a point 30 feet away from the sunken car.

Only for the fact that impact with the water stove in the roof of the murder car and allowed the rear cushion to float to the surface, Curran's slaying might well have been the "perfect crime."

The cushion was discovered Tuesday, and showed bloodstains that indicated foul play. Because of the depth of the murky waters, nothing tangible was unearthed until Diver Wallace made his startling discovery yesterday.

Police believe Curran was driven directly from New Hampshire to the Quincy quarry, arriving there in the early hours of last Monday morning.

Windows of the murder car were open when it was found by Wallace, but they were believed to have been opened after they had been tightly closed to muffle the sound of the five shots.

None could be found near the quarry who had heard any shots or noises that would have aroused any suspicion. The nearest house, however, is some distance from the cliff.

PREDICTED OWN DEATH

Curran died as he had predicted after his testimony sent Anthony Dembowski, 22, of Middle st., South Boston, and Thomas F. Faggiano, 20, of Cushing Hill rd., Dorchester, to prison for the McDonald assault.

Before and even during the trial, he received warnings by word, letter, by telephone, and by notes, that testimony he planned to give would mean death.

Sending Curran to jail was felt by officials as the next way to keep their star witness from harm and to have him available when Wallace and Sullivan were captured.

Several attempts were made to bail him at Plymouth jail but in each instance a trace of suspicion that he was "on the spot" caused Curran to refuse until bail of $500 was posted by George F. Murphy of Shapley rd., Medford.

able to realize that he is the only one left who may yet send the notorious Gustin to prison. He is incapable of fearing the violence of gangland that nearly cost him his life while officers outside keep their 24-hour watch on his home.

"If they only would shoot each other . . . ," McDonald said with an effort, to close the interview and as if trying to forget a painful subject.

'Red' Saved From Potter's Field

He received his "reward"—death—for "squealing" on his gang.

Now the police, who tried to protect him, will reward him in their way for the aid he gave to convict him and the gang that nearly killed Detective Dan McDonald.

Sergt. James V. Crowley and Special Officer Thomas Conaty, of the detective bureau, who protected Curran for months, today asked Deputy Supt. Anderson to request Commissioner Hultman for permission to take up a collection for the burial.

Anderson told the officers to go ahead and arrange for the burial and he would see that the bills were paid.

Curran Twice Refused Bail

"Red" Curran was in Plymouth jail for two months for his own safe-keeping.

Twice attempts were made by gangsters to bail him and twice he refused. He was afraid of just what eventually happened.

On April 12, however, when a third attempt was made, he accepted. There, were two reports: one that he had made a deal with the Gustins not to testify and was assured he would not be harmed; one that he had only pretended to deal with them and was actually double-dealing and planning to lead police to Stephen Wallace and Frank Sullivan.

POLICE GUARD M'DONALD FROM GUSTIN KILLERS

Special Officer Daniel J. McDonald, victim of the brutal beating which in its sequence carried two Gustin gang members to State Prison and Thomas "Red" Curran to his death in a Quincy quarry hole, is "on the spot" today and will be "rubbed out," according to information received by Deputy Superintendent of Police John M. Anderson today.

McDonald, a physical and mental wreck as the result of the beating he suffered last January, was summoned to police headquarters today.

He was instructed not to answer any phone calls or to meet any men posing as police inspectors.

McDonald is to be lured from home, according to police information, and killed, because he is the only remaining witness who can testify against Steve Gustin Wallace and Frank Sullivan, who took part in beating him.

BROKEN BY BEATING

McDonald was taken home under strong police protection and his home will be guarded every minute of the day until Steve Gustin and Sullivan are arrested.

In addition to being wanted for assault on McDonald, both men are being sought in connection with the death of Curran, whose bullet-riddled body, at the bottom of an abandoned quarry, was the Gustin gangsters' public announcement of their treatment of squealers and their defiance of the police.

McDonald is a broken man. Partially deaf, half-blind, his nerves shattered and his memory impaired.

IT WAS CURRAN'S FATE

As he sat in the living room on Norton st., Dorchester, today before being summoned to headquarters McDonald listened to a reporter detail the gruesome account of Curran's death. Curran, who unwittingly helped avenge the attack on him.

He indicated no sorrow at Curran's death. He had foreseen it.

It was what a gangster should expect.

About his own welfare, he appeared equally indifferent. Suppose the Gustin gangsters should try to eliminate him from the case for all time?

He didn't think they would.

WANTS GUSTIN TO PAY

He knows two men, Thomas P. "Fagot" Dineen and Anthony Dembrowski, Gustin gang members, are in State Prison for their part in the attack on him. He knows that "Red" Curran's testimony sent them there. He knows "Red" Curran is dead because he told the story which sent the gangsters to prison.

But his clouded mind does not react to this knowledge. It is as if someone had said, "It's a nice day," and McDonald, recognizing a sunbeam, should answer, "Yes, it's a nice day."

Only once during the interview did McDonald's mind seem to grasp the situation. Only once did he show a hope that Gustin and the rest of his gang would pay for their crimes and for their attack on him.

But as he groped for words, the flash in his eyes faded. And he was only able to mumble, "Dembrowsky and Dineen are in jail . . . Curran is dead . . . that leaves only Steve Gustin and Frank Sullivan . . ."

JAIL MEANT LIFE

For a few minutes he talked briefly about Curran's death. But as if he himself was in no way connected with the sordid gangland

"I thought it was a mistake for Curran to leave Plymouth jail on bail. There was only one reason why anyone wanted to bail him," he said.

So, Special Officer McDonald sits in an easy chair at his home, unaware of the fact that he is the only one left who may yet send the notorious Gustin to prison. He is incapable of fearing the violence of gangland that nearly cost him his life while officers outside keep their 24-hour watch on his home.

VETS OF THREE WARS JOIN IN SERVICES

Veterans of three wars stood shoulder to shoulder once again today preparing for the annual observance of Memorial Day tomorrow when Boston will join the rest of the nation in paying tribute to the memory of its hero dead.

Hundreds of patriotic and memorial services are scheduled in all parts of Greater Boston. Cemeteries will be filled to overflowing throughout the day as graves are decorated. Parades and civic celebrations will also be held in practically every city and town, not only in Greater Boston but throughout the Commonwealth.

THIN BLUE LINE

Decoration of graves, not only of veterans but of the loved ones of thousands of Greater Boston residents, was started yesterday in the various cemeteries. This will be continued through today and tomorrow with the greatest numbers expected tomorrow.

The thin blue line of the Grand Army of the Republic has dwindled sadly again this year. Once 25,000 strong in Massachusetts there are now only about 500 aged veterans of the Civil War still living. Of this number only about 100 are expected to take active part in the various services.

Survivors of Boston Post, G. A. R., will meet at the Post Hall tomorrow and will march to the Soldiers' Monument on the Common for exercises there. Assisting them will be the Sons of Union Veterans, members of the Women's Relief Corps, boy and girl scouts and two bands. Veterans of the Spanish and World Wars will also hold exercises.

Special memorial services will be held in Catholic churches as well as in those of other denominations. The annual memorial exercises of the Charitable Irish Society will be held at Old Calvary Cemetery.

VETERANS TO MARCH

Various posts of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars will hold special exercises during the day tomorrow. Many plan marches to various cemeteries where appropriate ceremonies are planned.

Many memorial services were held in churches throughout Greater Boston yesterday. Veteran and patriotic organizations also held meetings in observance of Memorial Day or to make plans for activities in which they will engage tomorrow.

The State House appears to be a fruitful place for lobbyists, registered and unregistered, these days. The corridors are over run with them. It will be no surprise if a protest against their activities is lodged from some of the legislators in the near future.

Rep. Albert F. Bigelow of Brookline, chairman of the House ways and means committee, and Rep. Martin Hays of Brighton are at sword points in the House. They are due for a clash over the new tax revenue bill.

Old and New Books on Problem of Machine

By Gilbert Seldes

Gilbert Seldes

In "Alice Through the Cellophane" (which is too short, a mere pamphlet selling for a quarter at newsstands) E. B. White mentions an example of complexity in American life. It is the sale of counterfeit tickets to the anti-Hitlerite rally in Madison Square Garden. "When you get men printing fake tickets of admission to a meeting to protect racial prejudice in a country thousands of miles away," he says, "you have got some idea of what complexity means." I offer Mr. White another one, also in counterfeiting. If, when you buy a few lilacs, you notice your florist scanning your dollar bill and comparing it with a printed list stuck in his cash register, you will assume that he doesn't like your face and wants to make sure that the currency you have given him is not listed as counterfeit on the little card. You will judge, correctly, that the little card is valuable as a form of self-protection. But you will not know, unless you have read the papers carefully, that the little cards are as much of a racket as counterfeiting itself. Men have printed and sold cards bearing numbers of counterfeited bills—and these numbers were, in a word, fakes. The brilliant and complex Frenchman, Andre Gide, once wrote a novel called "The Counterfeiters," which wasn't so complex.

Among the other merits of "Alice Through the Cellophane" is the outstanding, the almost incredible merit that it isn't by so much as word a parody of the original Alice. That makes the booklet pleasant reading, superficially; Mr. White's ironic intelligence makes it more pleasant still. I detect in it a little weariness of our industrial system, a little defeatism in the final words: "It is just possible that in our zeal to manufacture sunlamps at a profit we have lost forever the privilege of sitting in the sun." As I am not a defeatist, this does not impress me. The lines have been and will be quoted, but there are better things in Mr. White's mind.

"Primitive people," he says, "in their innocence, produce only as much goods as they seem to require, but the philosophy of our culture is different. We must produce an almost infinite amount of everything, and merchandise it by sleight of hand. The whole burden of recovery from the present crisis is said to rest on the restoration of the nation's buying power; yet when you think about it, a man's buying power is one of the least noble of his powers and should not be the arch that supports his peace and well-being. Or even his fairly-well-being."

That is better than nagging at machinery—and newer because it is only as old as the Sermon on the Mount.

Back to Butler

I have not seen the Limited Editions Club production of Samuel Butler's "Erewhon"—only Mr. Edmund Wilson's introduction. It is particularly timely. "Erewhon" is the source from which most of us, perhaps unconsciously, get our ideas of distrusting machinery. Its title is an anagram of Nowhere, so neatly reversed that it implies Everywhere. Since Butler wrote, machinery has more and more impressed itself on man. His ideas, less brilliant than the concept of the Robots in R. U. R., are more subtle and more interesting.

It happened that, wanting a book of short bits for reading when I was tired, I returned to "The Note Books of Samuel Butler," which include material for the sequel to "Erewhon." "They have schools where they teach the arts of forgetting and of not seeing. Young ladies are taught the art of proposing. Lists of successful matches are advertised with the prospectuses of all the girls' schools." And, "Let them attach disgrace to any who do not rapidly become obscure after death."

You see in these passages why Butler was so sympathetic to the mind of Bernard Shaw. Everything stands on its head, which may make the subject and the onlooker uncomfortable, but you see things differently if they or you are feet in the air.

The parts of the book dealing with Butler himself are more humanly interesting. Here was a man whose first book, "Erewhon," sold well and who, for years after, wrote for a non-existant audience. After his death his masterpiece, "The Way of All Flesh," brought his name renown. He says of himself, "Perhaps it is better that I should not have a chance of becoming a hack writer, for I should grasp it at once if it were offered me." Few people were as intelligent; few as frank.

MAGNATE URGES SALES TAX

New York, May 29 (US)—Adoption of a sales tax would solve the nation's budget problem, in the opinion of Adolph Lewisohn, philanthropist, who celebrated his 84th birthday Saturday.

Still intensively active, Lewisohn was interviewed at his office at 61 Broadway, where he puts in an appearance at least three times a week to supervise the copper mining interests he heads.

He expressed a keen interest in events in Washington. Commenting on the proposed general sales tax, he said:

"I can't think of a type of taxation that could be distributed more evenly or fall on rich and poor alike more fairly. The proposed increase in income taxes would only be a heavier burden on those who can least afford to pay more."

It is not the policy of the Jenney Company to make any such statement. If the New Improved Jenney HY-POWER had been on sale a year or two ago it would have been equal in quality to the premium price gasolines sold at that time. But premium gasoline—such as Jenney AERO and ETHYL have also been improved and are still premium fuels at premium prices.

THE CITY WAS TOO SMALL FOR US ON

Saturday, traffic was very trying and life was not the simple leisurely thing it should be, with everyone getting into the most outrageous crowds in the shops and subways, telephones ringing, people chattering . . . in fact, we were fed up with it all and for fully fifteen minutes we hated this machine age and all that it portends . . .

MRS. WILBUR GRANT

We wanted to leave it all behind us and seek the peace and serenity of the fields and woods, go back to God and nature (which, praise God, are always there to go back to) and to find a place where our soul could be our own for at least one day . . .

Starting early, we motored up into the quiet hills of Peterboro, N. H., over the winding roads of Concord and Groton, inhaling the sweet scents from the rain drenched hedges as we flew along, as each leaf glistened like silver in the morning sunshine. In the hush of a summer's noon, we drew up before the open door of Dunkuntun, a charming old New England farmhouse high up on a slope overlooking Mount Monadnock and surrounding hills . . . the fulfillment of a dream of Mr. William H. Mayo of Boston and Peterboro and many trips around the world . . .

Dunhuntun, as the name implies, is the finish in the lifelong quest for a home which is situated on a hill, commanding a wonderful view of mountains and skies, with interesting old gray barns and stone walls running away in every direction toward meadows, fields and woods . . . Deep understanding of Colonial traditions, with thought and love for ancient beauties has achieved for Mr. Mayo one of the most livable and levable abodes in the country, a gem of historic interest, precious treasure and homely comfort.

One of New England's Show Places

WHEN MR. MAYO FOUND THE TUMBLE-DOWN farmhouse which is now one of the show places of New England, the framework of the house and barns, the old beams and rafters were all in nearly perfect condition and alignment and when work of restoration started it was around these that the new buildings were constructed . . . cleaned and polished they give a line and color such as could only be acquired through the unstudied and unconscious efforts of a generation long past . . .

Mellow pine and maple lent a golden glow of hospitality as we crossed the broad threshold, burning logs in the wide hearth invited us to linger long into the twilight as Mr. Mayo and his charming sister, Mrs. Wilbur Grant, made our stay so pleasant with stories of the house and its interesting features that the day slipped away before we knew it . . . forgotten was the noise and confusion of the city.

The size and arrangement of the rooms in the main part of the original house are practically the same as in the restored house . . . the old kitchen with its spacious fireplace and brick ovens is now the little sitting room, panelled with old feather-edged boarding and over the mantel is hung the powder horn and musket of blockhouse days . . .

The low-rafted bedrooms are a haven of rest and comfort . . . high puffy four-posted beds with handmade counterpanes, old-fashioned chintzes covering the chairs and age-old linen, which harmonizes with the old pine, hangs over the windows . . . an aroma of the woods pervades all like incense . . .

Quiet Nook for Children

ONE SMALL, QUIET NOOK is a child's bedroom . . . golden maple with patchwork quilts, gilt-edged mirrors and a small desk and sturdy chair for play days enrich it . . . a little dressing table which must have been the cherished possession of a debutante of 1770 stands waiting for Gloria, six-year-old granddaughter of Mrs. Grant and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip K. Brown of Chestnut Hill . . . All this overlooking a flagstoned garden and violet-misted hills beyond will leave a happy memory for a little girl to carry through life, her sanctuary in meditation when life becomes disillusioning as it must do at sometime to everyone . . .

Across the garden is a guest house, which was formerly a sheep barn, but the lambs who invade it now are the young friends and relatives of Mr. Mayo . . . It is complete with living room and kitchenette and sleeping porch on the ground floor and two dormitories, one for boys and one for girls on the floor above . . . the nicest place for a week-end party we have ever seen.

We could ramble on for columns on the fascinating lamps, old pewter, old Portuguese bed spreads, ship models and pictures, which furnish this oasis in a rushing world . . . we can only invite you to drive up any Saturday to Dunhuntun, Peterboro, N. H., during July and August, and for a small fee which will include tea from the fair hands of Mrs. Grant and friends who will assist her, which will go to swell the coffers of that popular charity, the Christopher Shop, you may see for yourself this beautiful New England home and refresh your soul at a shrine of the gentle and dignifed past . . .

Dance at Edmands Home

ONE OF THE DELIGHTFUL PARTIES of the week-end was a small dance given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Edmands, Dudley rd., Brookline, by their sub-debutante daughter, Miss Ruth, and two of her friends, Miss Elizabeth Everts, daughter of Mrs. William Everts, and Miss Elizabeth Prescott, daughter of Mrs. Winwood Prescott, for their Brookline friends. Mrs. Prescott had a dinner for 50 of the guests before the dance which numbered about 125 . . . Among the Fair Things attending were Louise Harding, Barbara Coffin, Susannah Crocker of Milton, Marian Lesson, Jane Dinsmore, Elise Russell, Celena Robbins, Ann Upton, Molly Rogers, Barbara McKissock, Jane Matthews and Janet Grey . . .

Andre Reggio, Peter Allen, Charles Brown, Henry Vose, James Hunnewell, Mark Dall, Sheppard Brooks, Thomas Bingham, Henry Petri, Clement Titcomb, Bill Schmidt, Gordon McKissock and Bill White were ushers who escorted the young folks to meet Miss Ruth, who was adorable in midnight blue mousseline de soie which set off her lovely blonde coloring, Elizabeth Everts, who is very sweet-looking Titian-haired maiden, and Miss Prescott, who is tall, slim and lovely.

The gardens were lighted by Japanese lanterns stuck on poles, and Jack Marchard and his popular orchestra sent sweet strains of music out into the night . . .

Latest Notes of the Fashionables

—By Dorothy Whipple Fry—

MRS. QUINCY A. SHAW, JR., of Sears rd., Brookline, is looking most attractive this spring in a soft yellow sport frock, high masculine collar and short sleeve.

The Flower Show in Chestnut Hill has been one of the bright spots of the season. Mrs. Edwin S. Webster is looking so trig in a dark blue ensemble, beautifully fitted with touches of white.

Mrs. Sidney Stone wore black and white print with dainty touches of ecru at the neck and sleeves as she assisted Mrs. William A. Copeland in her lovely garden at Lawrence rd., Brookline.

Miss Constance Young was exquisite in a white creation, lovely on her lythe and slender figure while Miss Sally Waters chose one of the spring prints and in her daintiness reminded one of a modishly attired bridesmaid.

Miss Dorothy West was a poem of dainty loveliness in a soft flesh-colored frock of open work with matching horsehair hat, modelled into a becoming shape about her face.

SCIENTIST tells WHY this soap is such a wonderful aid in keeping skin YOUTHFUL

YOUTHFUL SKIN . . . what a world of happiness those two words mean to a woman!

The Secret of Youthful Skin

Because, science now tells you, skin gradually loses the precious elements nature herself puts in skin to keep it young-looking . . . and it's these precious elements that skin must have to be youthfully attractive.

But here's good news . . . scientists explain now you can check the loss of those precious elements. Lux Toilet Soap actually contains such precious elements . . . and is completely free from harshness, readily soluble. That is why this wonderful soap is an unquestionable aid in keeping skin young-looking . . . softly smooth, they declare.

Do you wonder that 686 out of the 694 important Hollywood actresses are so enthusiastic about this fragrant, white soap . . . have used it for years? And that it's been made the official soap in all the big film studios?

A Lovelier YOU

MILLIONS of women (and men, too) have confirmed Hollywood's experience.

You, too, can have a softer, smoother, younger-looking skin with this scientific care. Get Lux Toilet Soap today—and prove it to your own satisfaction.

For EVERY Type of Skin

. . . oily . . . dry . . . "in-between"

"I can well understand why screen stars prefer it . . ."

says Miss Belle Dawson, of Washington, D. C. "For years I've been using Lux Toilet Soap and the care it has taken of my skin is a delight. My skin is always smooth and clear and it keeps young-looking."

CRUSADERS PUT 3,000,000 INTO RACKET WAR

New York, May 29—Mass meetings, radio broadcasts, band concerts and other means will be used throughout the country to stir a nation-wide activity against racketeering, the Crusaders announced today.

With its membership of 1,250,000 men already enlisted in the campaign, the organization is seeking now to create a junior division at least as numerous to the same end.

A total force of almost 3,000,000 members in both units, parent and junior sections, the Crusaders believe, will make tremendous headway toward eliminating the racketeer.

The first blow against racketeers to be struck by the Crusaders will take the form of a mass meeting in Carnegie Hall, Friday evening. Speakers will include Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, Dr. Mather Abbott, Gene Tunney and Fred G. Clark, commander-in-chief of the Crusaders. The movement has the support of Gen. John J. Pershing and other distinguished men who see in it the beginning of a national success in wiping out racketeerism.

The parent organization is composed entirely of men. It had been intended that the junior division consist of boys and young men between the ages of 16 and 21. But the demand of girls and young women for membership is expected to compel the Crusaders to admit them to membership in the junior division.

What Are You Going to Do About It?

WHEN wolves of the underworld, on murder bent invade crowded thoroughfares at the height of a rush hour in the heart of a great city and sprinkle spray their bullets about the heads of innocent citizens, and escape unscathed, leaving maimed and dying bystanders in their wake, as was done on Broadway, New York City, recently, it is high time that the aggrieved populace rose to the occasion and demanded that SOMETHING BE DONE.

And the question is, Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer, what are YOU going to do about it?

Is this community, like so many others in the land, to be forever at the mercy of gangdom?

Not if an aroused populace insists upon the ROUTING OF THE RACKETEERS.

HOW many innocents must be slaughtered, how many bystanders crippled or injured on the public highways before the death dealers of the underworld are wiped out?

Not another one if ALL good citizens shake off their lethargy and voice a united demand that the duly constituted authorities wage an unrelenting war to the finish against racketeers—all racketeers.

Organized criminals make their own laws and ENFORCE them, even to the death penalty. Why can't organized society do as well?

It can, when law enforcement agencies weed out from their ranks those few base public servants allied with the underworld.

DRUG TRADE TO WATCH WAGE

Maintenance of fair wages and achievement of other objectives of President Roosevelt is the announced purpose of the Drug Institute of America, Inc., which was formed today to unite all divisions of the $2,000,000 drug industry.

In addition to a fair standard of wages the elimination of harmful competition is included in the other aims of the new organization.

In the same manner as the American Iron & Steel Institute and the American Petroleum Institute, members will co-operate with the government and other agencies for the common good.

Temporary executive offices have been established in New York under the temporary managership of Wheeler Sammons, former president of the Associated Stores Co., and the A. W. Shaw Co., and former vice-president of the McGraw-Hill Co., all of New York.

A directorate of 20 leaders in the drug industry and a council of 29 members will be chosen to work with the executive committee and another board of 30 additional members to insure geographical and business representation.

Aid in promoting the new institute will also be sought from the American Medical Association and from women's clubs throughout the country.

MRS. HEARST'S WORK PRAISED

The life of Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst, mother of William Randolph Hearst, and her work for the advancement of education, science and humanity in this country were detailed by Henry J. "Sailor" Ryan in his weekly broadcast, "Unknown Greats," over Station WBZ.

Ryan pointed out that in his allotted broadcasting period it was impossible to do more than touch briefly on her 76 years of generosity and service to the needy and afflicted. He characterized her as a "roaming humanitarian" in telling how she ministered personally to the unfortunate.

He declared she was known as the "Patron Saint of the sick and needy" as well as of the ambitious. He told of her contributions to hospitals and institutions and also of the aid she extended to boys and girls in securing education.

He also spoke in detail on her efforts and financial support which resulted in the preservation of the home and tomb of George Washington at Mt. Vernon. He told of her similar work in raising the University of California to its present position.

In summing up Ryan declared that it was not the stipendous sums she devoted to worthy causes which aroused admiration for her but rather the example she presented to all men and women of a life devoted to humanity.

Prayer and Orange Juice End Gandhi's 3 Weeks' Fast

Poona, India, May 28 (AP)—"In God's name I began this fast, and in God's name end it," said the Mahatma Gandhi today as he broke a three weeks voluntary abstention from food in the "Untouchables" cause by sipping a glass of orange juice.

He began the fast at noon May 8. The end of the fast was as impressive as its beginning.

Long before the hour at which the ordeal was ended, 8.30 a. m. (2:30 a. m., E. S.T.), the residence of Madame Sarojini Naidu, poet and lecturer, where the fast was carried out, was besieged by the Mahatma's friends of all castes, Hindus, Mohammedans, Parsees and Europeans.

Finally 150 friends and a score of newspapermen were admitted into a big white hall. In a smaller room behind open glass doors, the Mahatma lay motionless on a bed with wet cloths on his head. Beside him was a half glass of yellow fruit juice. A faint cloud of incense rolled over the assembly.

Gandhi's bed then was brought into the larger room, where he voicelessly acknowledged the greetings of all present.

"I am glad the untouchables are here with us. I do not know what God expects from me now, but whatever it may be, I know he will give me strength for it."

It was revealed he had grown a beard during the fast, since he refrained from shaving to avoid unnecessary exertion. Owing to this, photographers were requested not to snap his picture. He was shaved this morning, however, before his public appearance.

Before breaking the fast, physicians revealed that Gandhi had lost 21 pounds, but that his pulse and heart were satisfactory. He was described as "terribly weak."

Mother is "BOSS"

MOTHER is "boss." When her husband died, leaving her four little girls, she had to be. She had to earn their daily bread as well as bake it. Now, the girls have grown to young womanhood, but mother is still "boss." Not a tyrant—just "boss" of the household because of her competency.

When the girls were working, she and they could afford such things as the vacuum cleaner, the washing machine, the radio, the electric refrigerator. One by one these were added, under partial payment plans well within the domestic budget.

Then the budget got a series of unbalancing shocks. One girl had a substantial wage cut; another worked part time; a third lost her secretaryship when the firm went out of business.

"I guess we'll have to do without the telephone and some other things for a while," said mother, after a moment's mental arithmetic. There was no demur. What mother said, went.

"I wonder if we couldn't wait a few days," asked May, the former private secretary, inquiringly. "I registered at the secretarial school today, and gave them my telephone number in case they wanted to reach me quickly." Mother agreed.

Well, May got fifteen days' work that month through telephone calls from the school, and the telephone still stays.

"A hen that lays eggs is worth feeding," explained mother. "Besides," she added, philosophically, "it saves my feet many a weary step when I want this thing or that thing."

'Ann Carver's Profession' Well Presented on Screen; Stage Bill Neatly Balanced

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

On screen the polymorphous art of the perennially appearing Fay Wray, and on stage an unusually good variety bill, one of the best of the season, furnish the features currently for RKO B. F. Keith's. In "Ann Carver's Profession," Miss Wray, who has done about every kind of role in the dramatic line, turns Portia pleading for her heart's desire at the bar of justice, and she wins her biggest case in manner that will delight her admirers. The footlight fare is a neatly balanced program of acts.

Gene Raymond, the up-and-coming Hollywood lad of the moment, has the male lead in Miss Wray's movie. Gene is the college athlete, heroine in the cinema's best style, who takes a chance on a flat purse and a cloudy future — he weds the pretty Fay, a co-ed. Having taken the step, they cast about for careers. Gene goes in for architecture, the Louise Fazenli bride for barrister, no less. He flops, she triumphs. Her keen brain makes her the best little lawyer in the big land of ours. Gene has some of the former pride left, and he chafes at living off her income.

Alack and alas, these unequal incomes! Gene turns to the night clubs, becomes a crooner, falls for the wiles of a vamp and is sunk when he is tried for her murder. But the gallant sweetheart of campus moonlight nights rushes to the rescue, and the jury is as weak as we are in the face of the Fay Wray charms. Does it end okay? Just go and see the picture.

It isn't a great movie, but it's pleasing enough. Actors are pretty fair, Fay going in stronger than usual dramatically. But the director is the boy, and he handles the picture so nicely that what could have been a draggy legal labyrinth flashes by, and is over in jig time, with true love triumphing, as ever it does in pictures.

* * *

Bob Ripa, one of the best of all jugglers on the vaudeville, Ripa has a knack of rapidfire speech while he manipulates balls, clubs and so on; his patter is entertaining almost as his amazing skill with his hands.

Larry Fleet and his band are in striking evidence on the boards. As usual, they perform splendidly. The turn features the presentation of Raymond Baird, gifted in a versatile way with musical instruments. They all get big applause. The orchestra also serves as background for some of the acts.

Expert dancing is the offering of Errico and Novello, and Margot and Libby Robbins go in for imitations. Hilarity has its chance when Bob Hope appears; stooges rise from various places in the audience, and soon the mix-up is merry as can be.

New Impresario

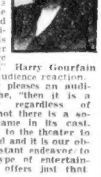
Harry Gourfain is now the producing genius who is responsible for the stage show at the Metropolitan this week. His work in New York and Chicago theaters has attracted wide attention, and he has long been considered a master of this art.

According to him it is quality which counts in a real stage show designed to please audiences and this test of whether or not a stage show is "good." Harry Gourfain is that of the audience.



"If a show pleases an audience," says he, "then it is a great show regardless of whether or not there is a so-called big name in its cast. Audiences go to the theater to be entertained and it is our object and constant endeavor to provide a type of entertainment which offers just that goal."

Featured Role

Globe Trotter

Tom Mooney, the world's most famous prisoner, is seen and heard in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now at Loew's Orpheum, as he temporarily quits San Quentin Prison in California to go to San Francisco where he opens his fight for liberty or death. The scenes show Mooney leaving San Quentin and he is next seen in a cell in the San Francisco county jail where he delivers his talk. Mooney dramatically declares that at his trial he will insist on complete vindication or death. "Any man," he says, "who kills ten people, doesn't deserve life imprisonment. He should be hung. But I am innocent." The Globe Trotter reviews the crime for which Mooney is charged.

The much-heralded "book burning" in Berlin shows thousands of college boys and others of the younger element of Hitler followers gathered around a huge bonfire in front of the State Opera House on Unter der Linden, in Berlin. More than 20,000 volumes, allegedly un-German, are fed to the flames. Among the books are several by American authors.

Millions of herring are shown being trapped in a big shipowner as they reach the headwaters of a river at Demarisceotta, Me.

Vaudeville

"Whispering" Jack Smith radio baritone, is the featured attraction on the new "Big 8" stage show at the Scollay today. Clyde Hagen, "The International Street Fakir," is another big act. Virginia Bacon has a new act this season, a dancing flash, featuring Paul Nichols, Isabel Rich and John Bacon, and the Tivoli Girls.

Ray Hughes, "The Fall Guy," is back with "Pam." It's one of those knockabout turns. Edgar Berzen and company will be seen in a comedy talking act featuring ventriloquism, called "The Operation."

Ben Bernie's "Five Sepia Nephews," a group of colored boys who strut in the Harlem manner, will be seen.

Other acts include Sidare, Shields and Lorraine in "Three's a Crowd," song and dance novelty, and Anderson and Allen, "Barons of the Balance," comedy balancing act.

The photoplay at the Scollay is Joe E. Brown in "Elmer the Great."

Howard to Re-open Middle of August

Special preparations are under way for the reopening of the Old Howard about the last of August and, as usual, the policy includes traveling burlesque attractions together with vaudeville and pictures.

Young Millionaire Associated With Technicolor Concern for His First Venture

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, May 29—The John Hay Whitney, Jr., money is definitely in motion pictures. Rumors have been printed but until today we had no reason to think the young millionaire's association with this business was more than gossip. Young Whitney has purchased heavily in Technicolor and deposited a large amount for his first picture, to be made by the Pioneer Pictures Co.

The Pioneer Pictures Co. has been organized by John Hay Whitney, Jr., and his cousin, Cornellus Vanderbilt Whitney, to produce pictures in the three components, the new Technicolor invention.

The first picture to be made by Pioneer Pictures will be "Green Mansions," to be produced in conjunction with Miriam Coo- Louella O. Parsons per at Radio and released by RKO. The Technicolor deal was negotiated by Dr. Herbert Kalmus, president of Technicolor and apparently Mr. Whitney intends to stay in the business. He has taken an option on a fourth of the capacity of the Technicolor plant.

Rogers in Role

One of the most interesting books of the year is "The Last Adam." The character of Mr. George Bell is one that is eccentric enough to tickle the fancy of Will Rogers. To his next picture and he is going to have a new leading lady, Vera Allen. Hereby hangs an interesting story. Miss Allen was assisting an actor in making a test in New York with no thought of herself. She registered so effectively on the screen when Winfield Sheehan saw her he signed her immediately for the Rogers picture. She plays the role of Janet Cardmaker, the woman who is a friend of the doctor through the years.

Wins New Part

Many people who have seen Marion Davies' "Peg O' My Heart," comment on Onslow Stevens' resemblance to Ronald Colman. "Peg," which has gone over so well in New York and which received such laudatory notices from the critics, should do much for young Stevens, who is under contract to Universal. We'd like to see him get a break, for he not only has a pleasing personality but he is a good actor and you will agree with me good actors are few and far between. Junior Laemmle has put young Stevens into "Secrets of the Blue Room" with Paul Lukas, Gloria Stuart, Lionel Atwill, Edward Arnold, Russell Hopton, Lillian Bond, Elizabeth Patterson.

SUNTAN SHOULD BE ACQUIRED GRADUALLY; PROTECT YOUR SKIN FROM SUNBURN

Use Creams Generously on Face and Body When Going on the Beach for First Time

By Margaret Matson

TOMORROW IS MEMORIAL DAY, and no doubt many of you will appear on Wednesday morning with faces and backs a bright pink from a day in the sun. Don't BURN; it isn't necessary. We really owe a very large vote of thanks to the beauty specialists for the fact. They have taught us how to tan without burning—or much worse, peeling. There are a number of sunburn oils on the market which you may get to rub into your skin before you go out into the sun.

If you intend lolling on the beach, for instance, be certain to rub oil generously over your entire back, legs, arms and face. It will protect your skin until it gets accustomed to the sun.

Pale Pink Skin

Let your skin get a pale pink—evenly all over. Cream it lavishly for the next few days until it turns to a slight tan, then repeat the process. A little at a time is excellent, but too much sun all at once can be a bit painful to say the least.

Someone was saying to me the other day that she had heard that it was no longer smart to get a suntan. That is not true. You may tan or not as you please. Smart women are divided on that score. It really depends upon your skin. When tanning first became the rage, many women attempted to tan whose skins were too tender to stand it. Others freckled. Now we have grown more sensible, and we do whatever our own particular skins require. One of the latest contributions in the preparation line is a tube of suntan cream that acts as a protective cream and an artificial suntan at the same time.

Artificial Tan

For those who wish an artificial tan that will stay on whether they swim or not, there are a number of suntan oils—waterproof artificial tans. They should be used lightly on the face, for, as you know, a genuine tan is always darker on the neck and body than on the face.

And then for those who wish to remain pink and white there are protective creams that withstand the sun. It's not well to expect too much of them, however. Broad-brimmed hats, scarfs, and so on are a necessary supplement. For freckles we suggest the protective creams plus a freckle bleach now and then.

The Marry-Go-Round; Your Personality

By HELEN ROWLAND

THERE IS NOTHING that she'd rather do than dream about all the wonderful things she'd do, if the gods had blessed her with talent or beauty or a lot of money.

* * *

That is why a recent wishing contest brought such a snowstorm of letters. What is the most valuable quality a woman may possess—beauty, wit, personality, style, sex-appeal, home-making ability, power to mold public opinion or a warm heart? runs the question.

* * *

"Personality" won by a landslide, showing what a lot of sense girls have acquired in the last few years. Less than a decade ago, the landslide might have been in favor of sex-appeal. And 25 years ago, all the honest girls would have voted for beauty, while the white sepulchres would have chosen home-making ability. Because in those days, a man's approval was the sine-qua-non of success—and the way to a man's heart was supposed to be through his eyes or his stomach.

* * *

But, in these enlightened times, every girl knows that, in order to hold her place in the sun—and even in masculine favor—she must possess something stronger than sex-appeal and more lasting than beauty. Of course, every woman believes that she has a warm heart already. Power to mold public opinion interests only a rare few of our brighter geniuses; and style and the domestic arts may be acquired.

That narrows the choice of heaven-sent gifts down to four. Beauty, wit, personality and sex-appeal—and the most desired of these is personality!

* * *

Why not? Personality gives you such a LOT for your money. It always includes some of the other gifts and may include all of them—and it outlasts everything else you may possess on earth and dies only when you die.

* * *

It is more important than genius, more arresting than wit, more fascinating than beauty and more holding than sex-appeal.

Home Wedding Attire

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My daughter is to be married very soon and I want to have a home wedding for her. We are people of moderate circumstances, and I want to have everything correct, but not overdone.

1. The wedding is to take place at four o'clock in the afternoon. What is the proper dress for the bride, the groom and the bride's father?

2. Is it correct for her to have a maid of honor and one bridesmaid, and if not, how many should she have?

3. Is is correct to have a reception afterwards?

4. Is it correct to have guests at the reception that we cannot have at the wedding?

MOTHER.

1. For the informal home wedding your daughter would wear an afternoon dress, with or without her hat, as she prefers. The groom and the bride's father could wear dark business suits.

2. For this informal kind of wedding the bride usually has only one attendant, but she may have both a maid of honor and a bridesmaid if she wishes.

3. Yes. Usually at a home wedding there is a reception afterward, and this may be as small and as simple as you wish.

4. Yes

A CORNER OF A COTTAGE

Miss Peggy Leahy of Somerville finds perfect relaxation in a cottage furnished in chintz and maple. The solid maple chair, with its barrel back, flat table arms and tied-in cushions, is one of the most comfortable she could select. Lamp, table and magazine rack are all of maple. A hand-hooked rug, and summery curtains of chintz and dotted Swiss, tied back so they cannot blow, complete the ensemble. All the pieces, even to the frock Miss Leahy wears, are inexpensive. (For the name of the store selling them, please ask Margaret Matson.)

Don't Postpone Your Tonsils Operation

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

THERE IS a popular notion that tonsils and adenoids should be removed only during warm weather. In consequence, many anxious mothers are now worried about this operation.

Some ask whether I think it advisable to have the child's tonsils removed. I cannot advise in a particular case because it is impossible to determine without a personal examination. But I can tell you a few facts about tonsils and adenoids.

Dr. Copeland

The tonsils are two round-shaped, soft masses located on each side of the throat. The tonsils may enlarge and usually do so when infected. As they increase in size, they approach each other in the middle of the throat. This condition leads to a pain and difficulty in swallowing.

Tonsils that are enlarged but not diseased, should not be removed. Undoubtedly, they will shrink as the child grows older. But diseased tonsils that obstruct the throat, causing repeated sore throats and attacks of tonsilitis, should be removed. They are a source of danger and hinder the health and welfare of the child.

It is easy to determine whether adenoids should be removed. Adenoids are the soft tissue found in the throat back of the nose. This tissue should be removed when it interferes with normal breathing.

Children with adenoids breathe through the mouth instead of through the nose. These children are backward in their school work and suffer from frequent head colds and recurring ear infections. They are underweight and are extremely susceptible to infectious diseases.

The question is often asked, how old should a child be before his tonsils or adenoids are removed. Ordinarily, this operation should not be performed before a child is two and a half years of age. In certain cases, where there is marked enlargement and difficulty in breathing the operation may be performed sooner. It should never be done during an acute attack of tonsilitis or during the course of any fever.

If you are in doubt about the condition of your child's throat, consult your doctor. He will advise you after examining the patient.

The Daily True Story

East Side Rose

BAXTER ST. slithers southward from police headquarters. By day it's a kaleidoscope of sweating, swearing truckmen, silent, swarthy keepers of shops, of ill-kempt, dirty urchins, eternally playing with rubber balls.

Glenn Gurley followed the route in silence, seeing it all, as might a tourist through the native quarter in Cairo, or the dagger lanes where natives wait for tourists in Calcutta or Delhi.

"And yet," he mused, "the most beautiful of roses grow from the most putrid soil."

LOCATES GIRL

Finally he found the address he sought. A youngster with the hopelessly grimy exterior of those who must play in the streets listened to his inquiry and nodded.

"Sure," he said, "four flights up, front flat."

This girl's brother was a gangster. He was the "death chair" prosecutor. He sat in the district attorney's office, the man whose record showed that he had never gone to trial on a murder case—and missed. He either, by pre-trial review of the evidence, recommended dismissal or sent his man up the river and through that "little door" from which the only exit is to the state autopsy rooms.

This girl that he loved with all that deep seated passion that exists behind fine, repressed natures of men who control emotions before the world.

For a full minute they stood there, looking at one another.

"You should not have quit," he told her, finally.

"You KNOW, Glenn. I had to quit. It wouldn't be fair to you, to stay on as your secretary, when you'd be trying to send my brother to the chair. If you lost they'd say you didn't try, and if you won—well Glenn, people of my race never forget a thing like that. See, dear, I HAD to quit."

BREAKS SILENCE

One of those pauses, poignant pauses that come when people who love one another dearly are trying their best to be calm—came. Then Gurley broke that silence. He fished in his pocket.

"I brought down your purse," he told her. "You didn't even take that when you left."

"But you could have sent it down," she told him. "There wasn't any need of your coming all the way down here just for that. It isn't"—she seemed clutching at any, every straw to float the conversation away from the vital, throbbing subject that was between them—"the kind of a neighborhood. And I'd rather have had you think of me as the smartly dressed girl who was your secretary, the girl you said never made a mistake, than as the girl who lives down here—like this."

"But I had to be down at the office, and then at Headquarters," he declared, "and it was just a short way over, after all. And"—there was just a short pause this time—"I had to see you, Marta, I had to see you."

He reached out his arm, as though to clasp her to him, but she drew away, and anguish burned in her dark eyes.

"Glenn, Glenn, please — you must think. Suppose some one should see you here, talking to the sister of the man you're going to try to send to the chair. You mustn't kiss me Glenn, you mustn't—ever. Please—please go away."

Then she turned, sobbing, and darted into the living room. He followed, quickly, and was beside the couch where she had thrown herself. He stroked her hair, her shoulder and slowly drew her head to his shoulder. He fumbled in his pocket and drew out a bit of crinkly paper.

"This is a carbon," he told her as she sobs abated. "I want you to read it—but first I want to ask you the most important thing in my life. I want to ask you to marry me, Marta, to be my wife, for always. I want to have the chance to live for you, work for you, love you—always. You and I, sweetheart, togeiher, aside from anything and everything. Just you and I and our love."

ACCEPTS PROPOSAL

Something within her swept away the age-old tradition of vendetta, of race and family ties—of everything, except the fact that she loved this man, wanted him above everything and anything. She nodded, and gave him kiss for kiss, as he drew her close.

Then:

"Now read that carbon," he told her when she was calmer again. She did. Her eyes grew wide with wonder.

"Your resignation?"

"Yes, sweetheart. You see I've always said I'd never go to trial in a case in which I did not believe the defendant guilty. This is that kind of a case."

"You see"—and he smiled quizzically down into the eyes that set his heart afire—"I want to be the attorney for the defense, if the defense thinks I am capable."

When the trial did take place, former Assistant District Attorney Glen Gurley kept his record clean—he did not lose a case in which he believed.

Girl Insists on Having Hero, Fiance Says

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I was engaged to the dearest girl for over two years. We went to school together. Then I began to notice when we went to the movies she always picked shows in which ——— was playing.

Most of her talk was about this bird whom she had never seen in the flesh. Finally she broke with me, saying I didn't come up to her standards as a lover. I got good and mad, and I told her there was nothing in her placid life as cashier in a tea-room that warranted my holding up trains, dangling over a precipice or holding a stage army at bay to save her. She burned me up, and returned my ring.

Ned F.

Dear Ned F.: Surely, girls get that way about "heroes," or why should lines of them be waiting outside a box office to see the heroes jump into lion pits, hold up trains and generally defy the laws of gravity to "save" them. But it's pretty slim fare, romantically speaking, and if you sit right I think the young lady will give you a ring or write you a note to come around.

Don't Let Sympathy Carry You Too Far

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a married man thirty-three years of age, the father of four children. At my work I met a girl of eighteen, very pretty, and have fallen in love with her. This poor child has had dreadful experiences since she was twelve years old. UNHAPPY.

Dear Unhappy: Your sympathy for this girl is commendable. You felt sorry for her because she has had a raw deal. You became interested in her because you felt that she was misunderstood. Perhaps your sympathy and friendly interest have served you too far.

SeasonableSalads--How toMake Them and When They Should Be Served Properly

By Martha Lee

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

IT'S SALAD SEASON again! Of course, we have our daily green salad to furnish us bulk and "vitamines," as Amous would say, but now comes the time when we think of salads as main dish meals, with French fried, creamed or au gratin potatoes and perhaps some hot rolls to kid the family into thinking they are getting something besides a pickup meal.

Let's think of salads in three classes. First, the light, or dinner salad; second, luncheon, or supper salads; and third, fruit or dessert salads.

The dinner salads include all green salads with French dressing and ones of non-starchy vegetables, such as cucumbers, asparagus and tomatoes, and provide us with bulk, minerals, liquids, fat and acids. Salads with mayonnaise or cheese or boiled dressing are never served with the dinner nor are meat, fish and egg salads or others containing proteins, unless as a main course. The only time fruit salads are served with the dinner is when a little acid fruit such as grapefruit is combined with greens and French dressing.

For Luncheon

Luncheon or supper salads include all which contain a protein such as cheese, nuts or cooked dried beans, fish, eggs, or meat, and are either plain or jellied. They are usually marinated in French dressing, then drained and dressed with mayonnaise and served in crisp greens.

For dessert salads we have all the fruit salads, and cheese balls or nuts may be added for part of the protein of the meal. Fruit salads should contain at least one fresh fruit or diced celery for crispness. They are dressed with French dressing, mayonnaise without mustard, mayonnaise diluted with whipped cream or fruit juices, or a light boiled dressing, and they take the place of dessert at dinner, luncheon or supper. They also serve as a main course for afternoon or evening refreshments.

The raw salads are most valuable, especially cole slaw. And besides the lettuce bag, it's well to have a second bag in which to tuck odds and ends of raw vegetables such as cabbage, cucumbers, celery, tomatoes, radishes and green peppers. Then you are never at a loss for material for a green dinner salad.

Tomato and Pineapple Salad

4 tomatoes, sliced.
1 cup pineapple, shredded.
½ cup nut meats, broken.
1 cup mayonnaise.

Arrange the tomato slices on crisp lettuce. Pile pineapple on each slice, sprinkle with nuts. Chill. Garnish with mayonnaise. Serves six.

SMALL PAY TO SHOP WORKERS IN FALL RIVER BARED

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

What price sweatshop employment?

What price to the health and morale of the thousands of girls working in Massachusetts' 750 sweatshops?

The Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser, in its campaign to rid the state of these factories, soon to bear legislative results, has stressed the low pay envelope as the index to the reflected industrial cost to communities.

But what of the strain, the warped attitude, the defeated vision, the thwarted ambition—what of the cost to these girls and women workers trading youth and parental supervision for the few dollars and cents of sweatshop employment?

What price industrial rehabilitation?

Rose loaned me her raiment, and suddenly I looked like a factory girl and talked like one. I wore a bright red silk dress, quite short.

"The boss will notice you quicker," she advised me.

And a dark blue silk hat cocked over one ear.

As we passed the City Hall clock, the hands pointed to 7:20 a. m. Rose and I began our trudge.

Up long flights of stairs and down long flights we journeyed on and on from one factory to another, pressing our claim to work. At Benjamin Green's factory we picked up Eva—another sweatshop work seeker, who for three weeks has made the rounds and worn out two pairs of shoes.

'KEEP COMING" IS CRY

"Nothing doing at these places," she said. I know. They tell you to come back tomorrow and tomorrow but the tomorrow they mean never seems to arrive."

Rose met a friend-worker at the Green factory.

"Say, what you getting for pressing?" she asked.

"Standard pay—$4.50 a week," came the answer and the girl disappeared.

I and my two companions waited in the Green factory for fully 15 minutes before any one took notice of us. The boss, laden down with an armful of dresses, came over to us.

"What do you want?" he growled.

"Work. Hiring any help?" I spoke up

"Whatyado?" he snapped back.

"Anything," I said. "Anything. I'll take anything."

"Anything!—anything is nothing, anything is nothing—nothing—nothing—nothing," he screamed back, and walked away, leaving us to stand there.

We walked down the stairs. Young boys were hanging over the bannisters, likewise waiting to be "interviewed."

"Keep coming for a couple of years—you might get a break—" they encouraged us.

Then to the Novelty Boys' Wash Suit Co., on Pleasant st. But the entrance was in an alley. I climbed to the top floor, three flights of dirty, dark, dingy stairs, until I reached a heavy door . . . no signs . . . nothing to indicate what it was—but I had been told.

An elderly man, collarless, wearing a green shirt neared me and in broken English asked me what I wanted. Refusing me the job, I was turning away when he called me back.

"What do you do?" he queried again.

"Press," I said. "I can press wash suits well . . ."

"Stop in tomorrow. I make special arrangements for you," he said, placing his heavy arm on my shoulder as a punctuating gesture to his remark.

ALWAYS TOMORROW

"How much do I get?"

"Oh, we see . . . what you care. . . . just come back tomorrow . . . we'll make special arrangements for you."

However, knowing that this company had been a minimum wage offender, I realized that his indifference as to salary was just another part of the general practice.

At the Kay Manufacturing Company it was the same story. It was a dirty-looking place . . . floor was unswept and around the tables where girls bunched over machines were whirring out raincoats, there was general debris.

The boss stood over the girls' shoulders supervising their every bit of work, until he noticed me and came over.

"No work," he said. "You couldn't make anything."

A young woman who trims threads at the Green company is paid four cents a dozen for this work on dresses without belts, and five cents a dozen for belted dresses. She said:

"One day about a week ago, I worked from half past seven in the morning until almost 6 o'clock at night and earned for that whole day a few cents more than a dollar.

"But I've got to earn what I can, because my husband has not had a steady job for almost three years and we have a car and a half od baby. My mother-in-law takes care of him while I'm away at work."

Anna, 19, who has done piece work on a single needle machine, also at the Green factory, for about a year and a half, told of earning an average of between $7 and $9 a week.

"The rates on women's dresses for this work, folding, vary from four to five cents, depending on the size and type. Working hard from 7:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. on week days with 45 minutes off for lunch, and from 7:30 a. m. to 1:45 p. m. on Saturdays, the most I ever made in one week was $9.45," she said.

"But my wages usually average between $7 and $8 a week when we are busy. Of course in slack times I have to sit around waiting for something to do, and my earnings drop as low as $6 a week."

Another girl, 21, who has worked on a single needle machine for about two years at the same factory, reported standing pay of $9.50 weekly.

Mary, 17, who clips threads from the fronts and collars of shirts on a piece work basis, for the Shelburne Shirt Co., made between Christmas and the first week of this month, weekly amounts that run like $2.85, $2.15, $2.50 and $2.65. These represent full week's attendance at the plant, though not full week's work.

She told of a factory ruling that girls must make $5 a week at their jobs, or be "fired."

"This went into effect since the company announced a five to 15 per cent increase," she said. "And since the raise, the girls who clip threads from the inside of shirts are paid 1¾ cents a dozen. You know we have to have our scissors. Of course we can only buy ten cent pairs and they aren't so sharp. But what can we do?"

This worker told of a team-work arrangement, whereby two girls work together, one cutting threads from the shirt collars on fronts, and the other clipping them from the bottoms and cuffs.

Until Christmas one girl did both jobs and received seven cents a dozen for the combined operation.

"I could make from $3.10 to $3.25 a week then," she said.

GIRL OF 15 TALKS

Grace, who gave her age as 15 and said she goes to continuation school one morning a week, also clips threads from other girls' sewing at the same factory. She makes $5.50 a week since the raise, she reported.

Before the increase, she said, she averaged around $3 and $4 a week.

"There are five in my family and my sister and I are the only ones working," she added.

What price sweatshop employment?

Another story on sweatshop conditions will be published in the Boston Evening American on Wednesday.

Hop Light Ladies Hopping With Books to Fill Pot With Gold

New York, May 29 (AP)—The Hop Light Ladies hopped their first full hop today to gather momentum for the big hurdle over depressing days. They opened a second-hand book mart on the sidewalk in Madison sq.

The pretty blue stand, matching the blue smocks and hats with black trim which constitutes the Hop Light uniform, had no more than been rolled into place when a kind old lady brought "The Time Spirit," by Julian Smigh.

Two Hop Light ladies manned the mart—their bylaws forbid the mention of names—and what they take in at 25 cents a copy will go into an iron pot to be distributed on pro rata basis according to the number of days worked. The books are furnished by second-hand book stories on consignment.

Other marts are to be opened as fast as the stands can be manufactured. The ladies, numbering nearly a thousand and increasing daily, will also mind babies, do paint jobs and accept any employment that isn't competitive.

All of them are business and professional girls out of jobs. Everybody gets the same in the prorating, including their executives. Its their own idea.

N. Y. CITY MILK PROBE PUSHED

Albany, N. Y., May 29 (INS)—A quiet probe of the big milk distributing companies in New York city is being made by the state milk control board.

This was revealed today by Kenneth F. Fee, director of the board, in connection with a demand by the New York city affairs committee that the board investigate Borden's, Sheffield's and other large distributors.

A request by the state board for the profit and loss statements of the dealers followed a demand by the latter for a one-cent increase in retail prices.

The demand of the city affairs committee for an investigation was signed by Paul Blanchard, executive director, who said the board should find out if the increase could not "be squeezed out of the surplus profits of these corporations instead of coming from overburdened consumers."

Wage Increase for 4600 Mill Workers

Lindale, Ga., May 29 (AP)—A wage increase of 12½ per cent, effective today, has been announced by the Pepperell Manufacturing Co. here, affecting 3000 employes.

Rockville, Conn., Mayp 29 (INS)—A ayp increase of 10 per cent became effective for about 1400 employes of the Hockanum Woolen Manufacturing Mills here today. An increase inwages for the 200 employes of the James J. Regan Mills is also to take effect shortly.

Speculation Greatest Problem Facing President

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

Famous Author and Diplomat and Former Ambassador to Italy

Copyright, 1933, Universal Service, Inc.

Washington, May 29—The week opens in Washington with one of the most insoluble of all our problems facing the President—the menace of speculation.

Having left a doubt, which has created controversy even in the courts, the President asked for a clear and defined action by Congress, putting us off the gold standard by law.

Promises to pay in gold dollars will be redeemed merely in "dollars."

To one of the principal skids that catapulted us into the depression we rushed back last week—a pack of fools.

Fools believe that sky-rocketing stock markets mean prosperity and permanent gain.

Fools have forgotten already that speculation gave us the quicksand of false values in which we wallowed down. Fools are blind to the fact that these false values have made promises to pay so out of proportion to true values that whole sections are paper-broke today; that mortgage debts cannot be collected; that rents cannot be paid.

Fools cannot see that speculation drew out capital from active creative use, that surpluses of corporations were used to buy their own stock or were thrown into the call money market, that brokers' loans wheedled our productive capital and our insurance against the storms of depression away from their normal uses.

NO GAIN AT GAMBLING

Passing capital around with swaying prices back and forth through the stock exchanges takes no pies, makes no steel, gives no jobs, pays no debts.

There is no gain at the gambling table except for those who run the game and who slice off their "take" as your money flows back and forth.

How many of us have jobs is a better barometer of prosperity than bubble stock quotations.

The President must see today that the only possible gain in a new skyrocket market is that it furnishes a cocktail of confidence.

Like alcohol it is a stimulant.

When will earnings come to justify such prices?

They must come soon, or the fools who hold the bags on the day of sobering up will suffer too much for this emergency to stand.

The whole of the President's painstaking program for recovery, strong as it may be, could not stand the false confidence and the hope of fools, the sucking of capital desperately needed for building up real values into the whirlpool of false values, the rout of good morale and disciplined progress brought about by another speculative spree.

The market, as sane men know, should only be the valet of men's creative endeavors. Must we so soon after the bitter revels with false values, false tokens, and financial hocus-pocus, have to say to that valet:

ANOTHER CRASH FATAL

"Drunk again?"

Speculation is not only dangerous to a population which cannot afford to lose from the pockets of the many into the pockets of the few.

Today, if it risks another speculative crash, the wise heads in Washington know that it is a menace to the fabric of our country, to our social and economic structure, to every painstaking brave plan the President has used in his attack on depression.

To prevent this last blow-out gives concern to the administration.

A solemn warning by the President to the country not to play with fire would aid materially to prevent our new-born hope for sound prosperity and the resources we need to use now and the brains and labor we must dedicate, and the President's own brave efforts in our behalf, from going up a blow-hole.

THERE are many different kinds of tobacco. The best kinds for cigarettes are Kentucky Burley, Bright tobacco from Virginia, the Carolinas, and Georgia, Maryland tobacco, and the spicy, aromatic tobaccos from Turkey and Greece.

All of these tobaccos are good. But we have found that the right combination is far better than any one kind.

Chesterfields are made milder and better-tasting by blending and cross-blending—welding together—the right amounts of Kentucky Burley, Bright tobacco, and Maryland tobacco, seasoned with just enough aromatic Turkish.

It takes many kinds of tobaccos to make Chesterfield. They satisfy.

THIS IS LIFE

Mail Brings Both Sides of the Vets Bonus Question

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

One of those mildly dramatic coincidences which the U. S Post Office sometimes makes possible brought me on the same delivery two letters diametrically opposite in tenor upon a subject which makes them suitable for printing just before Decoration Day. One was a somewhat violent poem, the other a piece of analytical prose.

R. E. ROGERS

Last week, at the very tip end of a column devoted to other and irrelevant matter I ventured to suggest that the American people would praise those bonus marchers who accepted government jobs but would have little use for the "leaders" who refused to take jobs themselves and tried to keep their men from taking jobs. The important sentences were: "It upholds the contention of the friends of the Veterans that what they wanted was not plunder but work . . . The men want work. The agitators want trouble, free subsistence, graft, contributions—anything but work. The racket is played out now that the government knows how to handle it, and these Coxeys know it."

This Man Replied in Verse

This so inflamed a gentleman from Chelsea that he burst into verse, totally unpunctuated, and addressed to me.

You call them Cozey's army
But who are you to jeer
The men who braved the battle flame
What gave you your right to sneer

In trying times where stood your feet
When theirs were in the muck
And welter of the crimson death
Where man made lightnings struck

What gift laid you for sacrifice
Upon the nation's shrine
They offered all that still on high
The sun of right may shine

What hand gave you to slay the woe
That on the world would fall
They seized and thrust upon the earth
Enduring peace for all

You call them Cozey's army
You have no word but scorn
But when you're in oblivion's night
They'll be in memory's morn.

I have read lots of verse worse than this of Mr. Elmer P. Whittredge's, of Chelsea. It has the afflatus. It sizzles. Not only that but its rhyme and metre match, a rare thing with amateur poets.

But even sympathetic readers must admit, I think, that the gentleman is a better poet than logician. I took pains specifically to distinguish between the misled rank and file of the bonus marchers, the men who would rather work if they could get work to do and the "leaders," the politicians, the Coxeys who refused to have their racket spoiled by employment. I like the gentleman's poetic rhetoric but I deny his major premise, minor premise and conclusion.

This Man Sees Need for Patriots

The other letter is no more serious but perhaps a little more reasoned.

"Today more than ever, we are in need of genuine patriots, and readers of the American who are sincere lovers of our country must have felt grateful to you for your timely remarks concerning the bonus army's leaders who were highly insulted by the President's offer of reforestation employment. You made a perfect hit against unpatriotic activities, and I, who enjoy your column, congratulate you for being unafraid to show up a menacing element for precisely what it is.

"It does not cheer us to find it necessary to take issue with men whom we had once praised and pointed out as patriots, but we are confronted with a disgraceful spectacle that leaves no other course open to us. We find many ex-service men, wholly unappreciative, who are antagonistic toward the government, which has been more liberal toward men formerly in the service than any other government ever has. We have been extremely tolerant with this antagonism, but the time has come to show defiance and fight for the country's preservation.

"In doing so we must first admit that we are partly to blame for the ex-service men's conceit, because of the glamour we attached to them in the praise we heaped upon them shortly after the war ended.

There is more to this letter, but I want to end on the words "exclusive credit" and "united effort," because they constitute the best answer to our Chelsea poet and all who feel as he does. The writer, by the way, signs his name and address. For obvious reasons I do not print it.

It might be worth reminding ourselves that tomorrow, Decoration Day, is a day for the proper expression of gratitude and recognition toward the dead who died fighting for their country. Also, of course, we remember our own dear ones. It is a day of family remembrance and of national recognition. By a natural extension of the meaning of the day, it is a day of thanks to those living who fought in our wars and who happily survived.

RED ROOSTER TORCH IS GUILTY OF ARSON

GIRL 'KIDNAPED BY REQUEST,' SAYS PAPA

Guilty Plea of Father of 3 Refused and He Is Held in $2000

Although he attempted vainly to plead guilty to a kidnap charge, Benjamin Papa, 32, of Prince st., North End, declared in Malden court today that Miss Clara Bryson, 23, of Beacham st., Everett, went with him voluntarily Saturday night.

Papa revealed that he is married, and the father of three children, and is on the Boston welfare rolls.

When arraigned before Judge Maurice Flynn, he first pleaded not guilty and was held in $5000 for the grand jury. A short time later he said he wished to change his plea to guilty and Judge Flynn came back on the bench, but he refused to allow the guilty plea. Instead, he again held Papa for the grand jury, but reduced the bail to $2000.

Papa told the court, and the girl corroborated, that he has been friendly with Miss Bryson and that she telephoned him from a restaurant Saturday night and asked him to go to Everett and bring a friend."

He and a male friend drove out and were confronted by her father, who ordered them away from the house. They refused to go, and when Bryson went to telephone police, the girl said:

"Let's scram out of here before the old man gets back."

They went then to the home of a friend in Worcester st., South End. Papa declared

BABY'S BODY IN COHASSET COVE

The body was found on the shore of Sandy Cove in Cohasset with a mark indicating a fractured skull.

Medical Examiner Oliver H Howe said the baby had been dead one to three weeks but expressed doubt that the body had been in the water. An old silk nightgown and a pair of black bloomers were wrapped around the body which was in burlap sack.

Five-year-old Alice Jackson of Atlantic ave., Cohasset, who first found the sack, dragged it for some distance, unaware of its contents, until it was opened by her mother, Mrs. Charles Jackson, near the summer estates of Arthur Lyman and J. Willard Smith.

Mrs. Jackson notified Police Chief Hector J. Pelletier and his report to Asst. Dist.-Atty. George Arbuckle caused an order for an autopsy.

Harvard's Museum Gets Sable Antelope

Harvard University's Museum of Comparative Zoology has acquired a giant sable antelope, a species rapidly nearing extinction, which was killed in Angola, West Africa, by Prentiss Gray of New York. The horns measure 58 inches in length and more than 10 inches around the base.

Gray presented the animal to the museum and the mounting was sponsored by Edward Mallinckrodt, Jr., of St. Louis, whose son was killed in an airplane crash off Nahant a few months ago.

ALIENISTS VIEW KIDNAPER IN BRIDGEWATER

Broods in His Cell and Refuses to Answer Questioners

Bridgewater, May 29—Kenneth Buck, 28, confessed kidnaper of Margaret Peggy McMath, 10-year-old Harwich girl, today sat brooding in a cell in the State Insane Hospital here where he will undergo observation to determine his sanity.

Buck was brought here yesterday after he became violent in his cell in Barnstable jail and was placed in a straitjacket. He regained his composure, according to hospital authorities, and today acted normally, except that he refused to answer questions.

Robert C. Sherman, superintendent of the Bridgewater Farm, said it might take 10 or 35 days to discover whether Buck is sane. Ordinarily, Sherman said, the 10-day test is sufficient to show whether a man is really insane or only bluffing.

Buck is confined to his room, but is not otherwise restrained. Sherman said, and that there was no need of a straitjacket.

Dist. Atty. William G. Crossley went ahead today with plans for the trial of Kenneth Buck and his brother, Cyril, which is slated for June 13.

Cyril Buck who was lodged in a cell above Kenneth in Barnstable, was apparently undisturbed by his brother's maniacal outbreak and told guards he was not surprised.

YOUTH BELIEVED ATTACK VICTIM

Malden police today expressed belief Arnold Goodman, 17, of Seaview ave., that city, who is in a serious condition in Malden Hospital, was the victim of a murderous assault rather than of a hit-and-run driver, as was first believed.

Police said wounds about his head and face were evidently caused by "brass knuckles." Goodman is too weak to talk.

An investigation into the cause of his injuries is under way, but police are handicapped until the youth recovers sufficiently to tell what transpired before his unconscious body was found at Cross st. and Eastern ave.

CANDLER ALSO ADMITS GEM BURGLARY

He and Leshin Held for Sentence in Schell Marblehead Fire

Edward Candler of Mora st., Dorchester, former member of the notorious "Red Rooster" arson gang, pleaded guilty in Salem court today to a charge of attempting to burn the $40,000 Marblehead summer home of William I. Schell, Boston attorney.

He also pleaded guilty of breaking and entering, larceny and driving after his license had been revoked. He pleaded not guilty to attempting to bribe an officer.

Harry Leshin of White st., Medford, arrested with Candler, pleaded guilty to breaking and entering, larceny and as an accomplice in an attempt to burn a building.

Candler was held in $9000 and Leshin in $3,000 for sentence pending their appearance before a Suffolk grand jury in connection with an alleged incendiary fire in Matapan last fall.

Candler and Leshin were arrested in April after they had broken into Atty. Schell's home. They attempted to set fire to the house to cover up their theft of $1000 in jewelry. Candler, police alleged, also tried to bribe the arresting officer.

Candler turned state's evidence in the notorious Red Rooster arson gang trial in 1917 when he admitted having set several fires at the instigation of the gang.

Stabbed for Taking Ex-Striker's Job

Chicago Puts an End to Racketeer Rule

Coal Dealers' United Stand Against Gangs Is Backed by Mayor Kelly

By DAMON RUNYON

(This is the sixteenth and last of a series on rackets and racketeers)

[illegible] Service, Inc.

New York, May 28—In closing, for the time being, my series on the rackets as it exists in these United States of America, I can think of no finer object lesson of how to end a racket than is presented by Chicago.

Yes, by Chicago—the lair of the racket.

La[illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Attorney, Chicago has [illegible] a notable victory over a racket. Chicago proves that the fight can [illegible]. That it can be won by [illegible] the business [illegible] con[illegible] [illegible] of [illegible]. In the instance I am about to relate, some part of the credit for the victory must go to the business men, in this case the Chicago coal dealers, for banding together, and then standing together against a formidable foe.

Damon Runyon

I narrate here the story as it comes to me from Chicago, and I recommend it to the earnest consideration of every business man in this country whose business is infringed upon by a racket.

The Chicago Coal Merchants Association, comprising practically all coal wholesalers in Chicago, had for [illegible] negotiated labor contracts with the Chicago Coal Teamsters [illegible] Association, [illegible] is not affiliated with the Chicago Federation of Labor, or with the A. F. L.

RUN BY RACKETEERS

About 10 years ago, several leaders of the joint teamsters council of the Chicago Federation of Labor seceded from the federation and took with them several thousand teamsters. It is with this outfit that coal dealers dealt on labor matters.

In December, 1931, the coal men tried to negotiate a labor contract with the union for the following year. Negotiations for the contract were in progress when the union ended them by sending a letter to the coal men stating that the union had already made a contract with the "Trucking and Transportation Exchange of Chicago," to handle all matters of wages and working conditions for the union.

This trucking and transportation exchange was found to be a racket organization promoted by leading racketeers of the city. They dominated the outlaw labor unions.

Individual members of the Coal Merchants' Association soon received applications to become "subscribers" in the exchange, and were informed that the "registration fee" for each truck or wagon was $10, and that the monthly 'dues' to the exchange would be $1 per truck per month.

TRUCKS ALL MARKED

A metal T & T plate was to be furnished for each truck or wagon "registered" and no non-union man was to be allowed on any coal vehicle that bore such a plate.

In December, 1932, the coal men attempted to negotiate directly with the union [illegible] [illegible] under [illegible] exacted [illegible] men [illegible] coal men were [illegible] T & T [illegible] and [illegible] matters [illegible] contract would have to inform [illegible] the [illegible] that all be [illegible] with T & T.

Early in January, 1933, T & T notified subscribers" that it had made new contracts with the union [illegible] which T & T would control [illegible] the coal men for a three [illegible].

[illegible] the new proposed contracts were received. Among other things they proposed collection of past due accounts from coal [illegible]. Of course the coal men realized just what this meant—the old strong arm methods of enforcing payment, and receiving the big end for the T. & T.

"Subscribers" were also notified that the monthly dues of the T & T had [illegible].

Things did not happen after the coal men had turned down the T. T proposal until this May. On May 6 strikers were called involving 175 yards.

On May 9 T. & T. notified the coal men they would have to live up to their agreement with T. & T. The coal men voted to stand as a unit in refusing to negotiate with the T. & T. When the union saw that the merchants meant business, they decided to negotiate directly with coal men, leaving out the T. & T.

Their change of mind came after an announcement from Mayor Edward Kelley to the effect no trucks were to be further used on city business, the owners of which belonged to T & T.

States Atty. Courtney also announced that T & T. was strictly a racket organization, and should be put out of business. Courtney, the mayor, and officials of legitimate unions in Chicago suggested that the union cast off the shackles of T. & T. and deal directly with the coal men.

The coal men then executed contracts with the union directly, existing wage scales remained in effect for the union men, with the exception of a cut from $8 to $7.50 per day for coal truck drivers.

The merchants had been willing to agree to these terms all along, and ch[illegible] t T. & T. through its ra[illegible] [illegible] ections with the union officials was prolonging the strike in attempt to force them to sign up.

Case Backers Seen in Cash Register

Some brokers say the public is in the market on the largest scale since 1929-30, and that many accounts which were dormant for over a year, have now a fair quantity of stock.

Oils Are Favorites With Many Traders

Oil shares are still a favorite buy with many Wall Street traders, who have been accumulating oil stocks for some weeks past. They also are taking a hand in some of the oil accessory shares growing out of the pumping operations looming in East Texas fields. National supply is a favorite issue in the latter group.

Coca-Cola Cuts Its Common Dividend

Coca-Cola Co. declared a quarterly dividend of $1.50 on the common against $1.75 previously, and regular semi-annual dividend of $1.50 on the Class A stock, both payable July 1 to stock of record June 12.

Net profit of Coca-Cola Co. and subsidiaries for quarter ended March 31 was $1,301,333 after charges and federal taxes and dividends on $3 Class A stock outstanding, against $1,843,435 in first quarter of 1932.

Gains Dazzle, But U. S. Still Below Normal

New 1933 peaks were registered last week by stocks and also by bonds.

Our May gains are almost too good to be believed' various manufacturers confided to me a week. The transportation is so pronounced that they doubt whether it can possibly continue—such is the degree of pessimism and skepticism three years of depression have implanted in men's minds.

Take one example of many Executive VanDeree, of Dodge game me these detailed figures on Friday:

"Dodge dealers during the first quarter of this year took delivery of 20,196 Dodge cars, Dodge trucks and Plymouth cars. Orders received from May 1 to May 25 reached 25,039."

Here is an increase of approximately 25 per cent in a little over three months of the year. He added that all indications are that contrary to precedent, June promises to do even better.

Washington, May 29 (AP)—Secretary Wallace revealed today that consideration is being given a plan for leasing sections of land now planted to cotton and expressed the opinion that expenditure of about $150,000,000 for this purpose in payments to growers would have the effect of maintaining cotton prices at from 10 to 12 cents per pound.

BUSINESS GAIN IS SHOWN AS CONTINUING

By FRANK H. MELOON

Important indices show the general business gain is still continuing. Freight car-loadings, electric power output and steel ingot production all point high, despite the fact that some seasonal slowing down would not have surprised the majority of observers. Even at the lowest ebb of depressions, American business volume is tremendous; when, as now, improvement is showing speed, the volume is of course notably better. This is a great country, with plenty of room for optimists employing reason.

STATE ST. COMMENT STOCKS—BONDS COMMODITY EXCHANGES

STATE ST. Hears:

That inflation still rules the stock tape. Fear of what may happen to the dollar is the principal force behind one of the most hysterical buying waves in stock market history. No one really knows just why they are fleeing from cash for the simple reason nothing definite has been done to cripple the paper dollar. But such a movement can hardly be talked down and we must wait until the panic stricken ones have exhausted themselves and their buying power. Then a clearer view will be possible.

Finale

One or two brokers are calling the current burst the finale, and without apologies. They feel it well nigh impossible to offer sound advice when dealings are at such a hectic pace. Further, experience tells them that wild demonstrations in the share marts usually prove to be blow-offs.

When they give what they consider sound advice to retire from participation, they admit that it is hard to calculate the exact time finish will be written to the move. But they do know that the chance of a sharp setback at any moment is too great to gamble against.

Street Gossip

For the time being the conjuncture of events is favorable. News is agreeable to bullish operations and the public is in a buying frame of mind. The first halting of either force is likely to find a pretty thin market underneath and prices could tumble 5 to 10 points in a session.

Coppers and oils are being touted as the next firecrackers. Many of the inflationist bulls claim both groups are far behind. This is probably true. But it is also true that it is a sad commentary on the futility of hoping that inflation will cure a serious condition of over-supply. H. E. B.

GOVERNMENT IS PILING UP GOLD SAYS HANEY

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University.

New York, May 29—New "shot of inflation dope last week r[illegible] the stock market up at a dizzy pace. If one had gone to sleep [illegible] a broker's office in 1929 a[illegible] awakened Saturday, he would have noticed little difference in wh[illegible] was going on. Many of the same people would have been there, a[illegible] the tape would have been late.

They have been pushed in b[illegible] fresh indications of the uncertainty as to the value of money. First a step was taken at the initiative of the government to start the authorized unloading of three billions of government "bonds" on the banking system. Then somebody "decided" to put the final seal on our abandonment of the gold standard by legalizing the repudiation of the gold clauses in bonds.

So the dollar plunged down in exchange for other currencies, and stock and commodities worked up in terms of paper dollars. The public is now "hoarding" stocks and commodities, while the government hoards gold. Only debtors want paper.

What should we do now? We are forced to gamble in stocks or commodities if we are to make up the 15 per cent decline in the value of our money. If it is to be depreciated further, further gambling will be required.

Really the logical gamble is in commodities, since inflation affects them directly. Higher raw materials and wages, and operating restrictions imposed by "industrial control," may actually keep the profits of corporations down.

But such considerations as yet have no effect, and by popular consent the stock market is now the great gambling machine for betting on inflation and winning back enough more dollars to offset th[illegible] reduced value of each dollar.

So, we relatively poor people with our pitiful life savings and little, fixed incomes, may do well to consider the purchase of some of the safer stocks. These, I think should be such as earn and pay fair dividends, and are backed by companies in good financial shape.

Just to indicate the sort of stoc[illegible] I mean I might mention Spencer Kellogg, Union Tank Car, Mathieson Alkali, Rubberoid (Curb), Natural Fuel Gas (Curb), Hercules Powder and the best gold mining issues. Such issues seem to involve little risk of loss and should appreciate at least as much as the dollar depreciates.

But, if you do this, buy outright preferably, and certainly no more than you can carry on a 50 per cent margin.

And, since so many signs of a "climax" have appeared, which suggests some sell-off in a few days, I would, at most, buy only a part of what I desired.

LEADERS RALLY AFTER SELLING DOWNWARD

New York, May 29—Prices rallied over a wide list in trading on the New York Stock Exchange today after an early setback, which ran from 1 to 4 points for numerous issues. Trading continued to set a very active pace.

IN NEW HIGH GROUND

After selling orders had been absorbed, a number of trading favorites were advanced to fresh highs for the year or more.

Oil, metal, aviation and amusement issues were accorded strong support. American Telephone set a new high after losing around a couple of points. American Can, Jersey Standard, Atchison, Consolidated Gas, New York Central, U. S. Steel and Pennsylvania all showed net gains.

Trading failed to touch the feverish pace of Saturday [illegible] week end busine[illegible] further gain[illegible] provided [illegible] munition [illegible] fluctuated uncertainly [illegible] ber, silver and copper were firm however while cotton rose about 50 cents a bale. Continental gold currencies stiffened a little against dollars.

Speculative quarters still made the most of inflationary prospects, and traders were still anxious to buy stocks on the theory that the government would actively pursue its policy of endeavoring to restore commodity prices throughout the summer. Copper metal advanced ⅛ of a cent again, getting up to 7½ cents a pound, which is not far from the level at which it is estimated lower cost domestic producers can operate in black figures again.

OILS HOLD STRONG

Oils were strong from the start, as bulls turned to this group in the hope that government control or at least the threat of it would soon bring order into the industry again, and in consequence better prices.

There was nothing in the day's news to account for the flurry in the motion picture and aviation stocks, and brokers said bulls evidently turned to them on the theory that they had been lagging in the advance of recent sessions.

The monthly review of the Guaranty Trust Co. said that inflation had played no part in the business recovery as yet, save possibly by anticipation, and found it, therefore, not unreasonable to regard the current expansion as the continuation or the resumption of an upward movement that really began almost a year ago.

This analysis indicated a better rooted recovery than some quarters have supposed. Freight movement appeared to be holding well. Santa Fe reported cars handled last week totaled 21,395, against 21,664 in the previous week, and 21,970 in the like week of last year.

Says Truck Traffic Is Up 25 Per Cent

Truck traffic in the United States is 25 per cent greater than a year ago in practically all sections of the country, and in some districts is up to more than 50 per cent, Charles E. Cotterill, general counsel for the American Highway Freight Association, national organization of freight-carrying motor truck operators, asserted yesterday. Criticizing the use of railroad loadings figures as indicators of movements of goods to retailers and distributors, Cotterill declared that motor trucks have taken over the bulk of the business. He said:

"It is hoped that before very long there may be instituted a system by means of which to compute and periodically publish statistics as to traffic volume of the motor trucks."

Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, May 29 (AP)—Downturns in grain values formed the rule early today. Sellers predominated, influenced by assertions in various quarters that inflation had been discounted as a market factor for at least the time being. Opening ⅛—1⅛ lower, wheat afterward underwent an additional sag. Corn started ½—1¼ down, and subsequently held near the initial range.

Copper 7½ Cts., at New High for Year

New York, May 29 (AP)—A sale of copper in the domestic market at 7½ cents a pound, the highest price in about a year, was reported here today. The quotations was ⅛ cent above last week's final price.

Cotton Higher in New York Trading

New York, May 29—Cotton futures rallied sharply after early setbacks today. The May future in afternoon trading sold at a new high at 10 cts. a lb.

Parmelee Transport Net Loss Is Less

Parmelee Transportation Co. reports for quarter ended March 31, 1933, consolidated net loss of $300,863 after interest, depreciation, etc., versus net loss of $343,437 in first quarter of 1932.

Silver Up in London

London, May 29 (AP)—Bar silver, firm; 1-16d higher at 18 15-16d.

Notre Dame Football Practice in Winter Hodapp Is on Top

By JACK CONWAY

The surprise victory of the University of Southern California in the I. C. A. A. A. A track meet at the Stadium would seem to indicate the West Coast still leads in producing star athletes. It was the fourth successive time that Southern California has gained the high honors in this track classic.

MR. BOSTON

Stanford was barely nosed out for first place. The failure of its track men to measure up to the form displayed by its entries in the shotput and discus caused the downfall of Stanford.

The remarkable success of Coast athletes in major track and field contests is due partly to the amazing California climate. Youngsters are able to compete in outdoor meets all year around. Competition makes for perfection.

The East probably has as many athletes with as great potential possibilities as the stars from the Golden West, but they have not as ideal weather conditions under which to practice. I am not making this statement as an alibi for the failure of an Eastern college to do better than tie for third place, but rather because such is the truth of the matter.

Back in the days when California permitted 45-round boxing bouts and few other states tolerated the ring game, native sons starred in the ring. They possessed more opportunities to box than ring men hailing from other parts of the country.

Rockne's Teams Practiced Shifts During Winter

Leo Leary, former Harvard football coach tells an interesting story which illustrates how Knute Rockne's football teams at Notre Dame reached such a high degree of perfection.

"Knute gave some lectures on football at the Harvard Summer School," said Leary. "One day he took me into his confidence and showed me the formations which the Notre Dame team was going to use the following fall.

"'They are all good plays,' I replied, 'but some of them are so complicated I doubt whether your players will have time enough to master them after they report for practice in September.'

"'The boys have been practicing these formations all winter in their rooms at South Bend, Ind.,' shot back Rockne. 'They had their football all year at Notre Dame. With Rockne's genius directing things, it was not strange that Notre Dame had such wonderful football teams.'

Bobby Jones Played Golf When Four Years Old

Bobby Jones played golf when he was four years old and kept everlastingly at it until he won the British open, U. S. open and U. S. national amateur championship the same year. Golfers usually go South during the winter months, and so can work on a 12-months schedule at the noble game of swatting the little white agate.

Jack Sharkey, heavyweight boxing champion, gives most his attention to boxing and training. Barney Fox tells me the champion was in the gym 65 days from last June until he left for Orangeburg a week ago. When away from the gym, Sharkey is either watching a boxing bout or in the woods where he is building up new vitality.

Babe Ruth cares for little other than baseball. He would play ball even if he were not paid for doing so. The Bambino used to devote a great deal of his time to the ancient sport of eating, but when he found this was slowing him down he went on a diet.

Barney Oldfield will drive and talk about automobiles until you have gasoline in your nostrils.

Willie Hoppe believes anybody who can give him a new idea about billiards is entitled to recognition in the Hall of Fame.

Henri DeGlane and Ed Don George live so as to keep their bodies physically fit, that they may run mat opposition.

Perhaps the East will have to star in sports which do not require so much sunshine.

Apart from the weather I believe the West and Far West take their sports more seriously than we do in the East. For years the "Big Three"—Harvard, Yale and Princeton—considered themselves supreme in college athletics. This caused them to let down. They rejected new ideas and went along in old paths.

First the Middle West and then the Far West started to blaze new trails in sports. Notre Dame, Michigan, the University of Chicago, Stanford, University of Southern California, Northwestern and other great colleges and universities laughed at the old way of doing things. They became pioneers in sports and showed the same recklessness and daring that some of their good old New England ancestors did when they left the security of home to blaze new trails across the prairies.

I like the spirit of the young men from the West. They are daring and believe that records were established merely to be shattered.

Random Shots at the Target

The 10,000 crowd at the Red Sox-Indians doubleheader proves Boston is deeply interested in the efforts of Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins to develop a winner. . . . Give Johnny Hodapp, leading American League batter, with an average of .383, a great big hand. . . . And to think I touted him as a great second baseman and a terrific hitter way back in April! . . . Hooray! . . . Adolph Heuser dropped in to remark he would like to slam a few punches off the chins of Vittorio Livan and Dick Madden. . . . No objections from me. . . . Young Corbett and Jimmy McLarnin should furnish a great battle when they clash in a 10-round bout in Los Angeles tonight. . . . With the world's welterweight championship at stake.

B.C., H.C. NINES SET FOR DUEL

The finishing touches will be put on the Boston College and Holy Cross baseball teams today to get them in readiness for the first game of the annual series tomorrow afternoon at Mt. St. James in Worcester.

Both teams have had fair records this season. Holy Cross has shown remarkable strength on the defense, while the Eagles have demonstrated a zest for hitting they lost the Fordham game although they had three more hits than the Rams but one.

The Boston College team, however, is confident with the ante created Red Ray on the mound. Coach Frank McCrehan is positive that his pitching ace is capable of piercing the defensive armor of the Crusaders.

One of the strongest features of the Chestnut Hill college is the brace slugging outfield of Johnny Freitas, Bill Boehner and Bob Curtan. This trio has played errorless ball all season. Freitas has obtained extra bases on 18 of his 48 hits this season. Curran has the home run record and is pressed very closely by Boehner.

Coach Jack Barry hasn't yet divulged who he will nominate for the pitching assignment. Joe Mulligan pitched a winning game against Yale Saturday and may not be ready to go on the hill.

The big stickers for the Holy Cross team are Ed Brut, rangy center fielder; Don Maynard, rated as the finest catcher in collegiate baseball, and Capt. Frank Camarano.

Holy Cross will play the Eagles again at Chestnut Hill on June 12 as part of the Commencement program.

TERRIERS PLAY JUMBO NINE

Boston University is going after its second victory over Tufts when it plays the Jumbos today to prepare for two more games Wednesday, the first of a series of three with Harvard.

The Terriers won their first game from Tufts and June 10 but lost to Harvard.

The Bostons will be sent through a long drill today and will have another session tomorrow despite the holiday as they have not worked out for over a week. Tufts on the other hand, has played five games in the past week and is expected to be in far better shape.

Coach Harmon is not worried about the defensive ability of his boys, but he is afraid that cramping and keeping away from baseball has dimmed the batting eyes of his heavy hitters.

Capt. Art Wilson, Eddie Hart and Johnny Ulman have been doing the heavy hitting all year, Freddie Garabedian, however, has started to come strong in the last three games, and if he continues to hit against Tufts the Jumbo fielders will be in for a busy afternoon.

First Curve Ball Hurler, 88, Dies

New York, May 29 (AP)—Al Thonase Martin, one of the first baseball pitchers to throw a slow curve ball, died at his home here Saturday. He was learned today. He was 88 years old.

Four Ball League Tilts Feature Golf Card

By BILL GRIMES

With only two open tournaments, the Woodland four ball best ball on Wednesday and Thursday and the annual Thorny Lea medal play event, Friday and Saturday, this week's golf is confined, for the most part, to four ball league competition, and the club pair mixed foursome championship at Dedham.

Due to the holiday, the Boston 4 Four Ball League matches will be played on Thursday instead of tomorrow. After trailing Woburn for a fortnight, Brae Burn slid back into first place last week by winning a defeat on Weston, while Wellesley was splitting with the Mystic Mountaineers.

The Country Club, now in third place gained four points on Wollaston, beside passing Charles River which had plenty of trouble corraling the odd point from Winchester.

BRAE BURN CHOICE

On Thursday, Brae Burn will play at Commonwealth and the defending champions are favored to top Capt. Charlie Crane's outfit.

Wollaston has a chance to make up lost ground on Brae Burn at Weston.

Going into the sixth match of the Twilight Four Ball League Charles River and Brae Burn are deadlocked in first place. But not for long, for these teams meet on Thursday at Charles River. Abernoyle, pacemaker a week ago but now back in third place, hopes to pull up by taking Wellesley at Newtonville. Wellesley, playing at home, figures on climbing at the expense of Belmont Spring.

The Retail Stores Golf League four-ball teams will play at the Woodland Golf Club on Friday. It will be the fourth round and will bring together The Shepard Store and the C. F. Hovey Co. which teams are tied for first place.

HOVEY TEAM CAN SURPRISE

While Shepard's and Hovey's are dissolving the first place deadlock, Filene's will be fighting Sears Roebuck Co. If Capt. Bill Nugent is able to field the same team he did against the E. T. Slattery Co. at Unicorn, Filene's is in for a battle.

In the fourth match at Woodland, the two tail enders will meet, H. White sitting with Gilchrist Co.

Stamford Girl Nea Victor in France

Auteuil, France, May 29 (AP)—Dorothy Andrus Burke of Stamford, Ct., scored an unexpected victory over Ida Adamoff, 23-year-old Russian girl who is ranked No. 2 in France, in the second round of women's singles of the French hard court tennis championships in Roland Garros Stadium, 6—3, 2—6, 6—3, to reach the quarter-final round. Miss Burke and Elizabeth Ryan participated.

Collegiate Crown U. S. C. Track Goal

New York, May 29 (AP)—The track and field team that startled its own coach by capturing the inter-collegiate A. A. A. A. championships for the fourth straight year, has one more big objective.

The Southern California Trojans, surprise conquerors of the crippled Stanford array, 45 points to 42, now have high hopes of winning the collegiate A. A. championships at Chicago, June 9-10.

HUBBELL GAINS IN STARS' VOTE

Chicago, May 29 (AP)—Lon Warneke's margin over Carl Hubbell, New York southpaw, has dwindled to less than 800 votes in the vote to get a National League team to oppose the American League's stars at Comiskey Park July 6.

The Cub hurler today had 16,294 votes to 15,492 for Hubbell. Dick Bartell of the Phillies and Floyd Vaughan, of Pittsburgh still were running close together in the battle for the shortstop job, with the former leading, 8563 to 7,864.

The leaders:

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

Shed a tear for poor old Babe Ruth. He needs sympathy. He's so far gone that he could hit only three home runs as the Yankees were handing the White Sox a Sunday double defeat.

Seven American League clubs hearth agree with the critics that the New Yorkers would be far better off with Dixie Walker in the outfield and the Bambino on the bench. The trouble is that nobody has told the Babe about it and here he is with nine homers to his credit today.

Yanks Add to Lead

The victories gave the Yanks three games out of four from the White Sox, a record of eight wins in 11 starts at home against the west and increased their lead in the American League race to two full games.

The Pirates had their National League lead reduced to 1½ games over the Cardinals, when they split a doubleheader with the fourth-place Reds. Larry French chalked up a 4 to 3 victory for the Bucs in the opener, but Old Eppa Jeppa Rixey, who broke in many years ago in 1912, blanked the pace-setter, 5 to 0, in the nightcap.

The second-place Senators hopped on Rube Walberg for four runs in the eighth to hand the Athletics a 7 to 4 defeat. A triple by Mickey Cochrane with the bases full kept the As in the game until the eighth.

The Dodgers beat Carl Hubbell, crack southpaw of the Giants, to climb over the Braves in sixth place and send the New Yorkers tumbling down to third. Sam Leslie hit a homer for the Giant's and Johnny Frederick came through with one for the Dodgers.

Browns Top Tigers

Needing a victory to make sure of staying out of the basement, the St. Louis Browns came from behind to hand the Tigers a 5 to 3 licking. The Bengals outhit the Browns and made all the extra-base blows of the game, but they couldn't match the four-run rally staged by the Brownies and City crew in the sixth to g[illegible] George Blaeholder 6 yds.

WEST SURE TO WIN UNDER PRESENT SYSTEM

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, May 29 (INS)—They've preserved for years the bogus air of that greatest of all frauds, the gracious and gallant loser who is happy though defeated, because only in this way can they escape the onus of a self-confessed inferiority. Nevertheless, it will be necessary sooner or later, just for the sake of appearances, for the intercollegiate A. A. A. A. to do something about reintroducing at its meet the element of chance which caused it to start a set of championship games 57 years ago.

These were won on Saturday by the University of Southern California. They were won last year by the University of Southern California and for nine straight years they have been won either by the [illegible] of Southern California or by Stanford. Moreover, for 12 of the last 13 years, the meet has been won by one of three California colleges.

CONCLUSIVE EVIDENCE

I trust I'm not being unnecessarily harmed. But, to me, this seems conclusive. They not only have the better men but more of them.

In fact, the only "out" open to eastern colleges from now on is to darken the living-room and deny themselves to visitors. The alternative is to bring in as many that, in the general blunder and uproar, guest and host may have something more nearly resembling an equal chance.

That latter, if at all feasible would be a pleasant solution since the Californians must jointly weary themselves of their monopoly by this time and doubtless would welcome the novelty of a little competition.

Anyhow, scarcely every track coach at Cambridge on Saturday agreed that abandoning rather than narrowing the scope was the thing, the agreement being conspicuous after U. S. C. had scored 45 points to win, Stanford 42 points for finish second and Yale, Cornell and N. Y. U. 16 points to finish in a tie every way for third. In other words the combined total of the three best from the East barely topped that one best individual score from the West. That less alone. It isn't even adjacent.

SPITBALL STRIKE OUT

The only way to lick that is spit those points in as many sections as possible, and the only way to bring that about is increase the total of point-splitters.

Anyhow, if the East is intelligent it will admit that there just is and further sense in carrying on year after year the aimless, unequal struggle against the admitted superiority of California. They always take the cup. All we do hold the bag it came in.

DRIVER, AIDE DIE IN "JINX" CAR SMASHUP

By BILL CORUM

Indianapolis, Ind., May 29 (US)—Death took the wheel of car 42 here as the last of some 60-odd racing automobiles roared through sunshine and shadow in a grim battle to qualify for tomorrow's 21st renewal of the 500-mile Memorial Day race over the brick paving of the motor speedway.

Only 42 cars can start, but number 42—a Brady-Nardi special belonging to Ray T. Brady of Philadelphia—will not be one of them.

Always something of a jinxed "mount," as the daredevils who chauffeur these spiders of the speedways call them, car 42 went into a heart-stopping spin as it roared into the third turn of a warmup lap and never came out of it until it was a tangled mass of burning wreckage 50 feet beyond the outer wall.

TWO RACERS DEAD

Beside it when the track guard and fire truck reached the scene lay the bodies of Bill Denver, veteran dirt track driver of Audubon, Pa., and Bob Hurst, a local lad, who was his riding mechanic, when fate dropped the checkered flag on car 42. One of them was dead when they reached him. The other lived just long enough to reach the hospital.

But the boys of gasoline alley are not given to undue excitement over such a commonplace as death behind the wheel of an automobile.

Fifteen minutes after car 42 had hurtled the wall, there were other mechanical rockets shooting into that number 3 turn with a heavy footed driver kicking the throttle squarely in the face.

The twin fatality brought the death toll of the speedway racing strip to 25, according to a veteran observer. But that is not an appalling number when you stop to recall that the track has been in existence approximately the same number of years. Few dangerous competitive sports can boast a better record.

And there is more excuse for automobile racing on this course at any rate, than there is for some dangerous sports.

AUTOS GET ACID TEST

The Indianapolis speedway has been the proving ground—the incubator of the automobile in this country. Many of the improvements that have appeared on stock cars throughout the years have originated on this track and in this race.

"There are many interesting kinks to the driving business. For example the electric timing devices in use here have proved that the cars travel almost 30 miles an hour faster in the back stretch than in the front stretch.

Now the two stretches are exactly alike although some drivers count the turn out of the front stretch a trifle more exacting to get through. But that is not enough to explain a 30 mile an hour difference, and so the concensus seems to be that it is the crowd that slows 'em down. They are afraid something will happen with all those folks watching them. Odd, isn't it?

Dempsey Finds Baer Stronger Than Max

By JACK DEMPSEY

Former Heavyweight Champion of the World and Promoter of the Schmeling-Baer Fight

(Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Atlantic City, N. J., May 29 (US)—Well, I have gone through the ordeal of boxing one round each with Max Schmeling and Max Baer. It would be hard indeed to say which of the two is in the better physical condition.

I did considerable ducking during the six minutes I was in there with the young huskies. I guess that is nothing to the ducking I will have to do between now and a week from next Thursday trying to get away from people who want me to guess who will win the 15-round fight.

I know one thing. In my opinion either Baer or Schmeling would lick Sharkey. The sailor is going and my battlers—you know I am a promoter now—are coming, and coming fast.

Baer is strong, far stronger than Schmeling. California Max is bigger, has a longer reach and if anything punches harder with a left hook than my German double.

The Baer boy is the best built heavyweight fighter I've ever laid eyes on. He is smooth muscled. He has no bunchy or knotty muscles to tire out too quickly.

If Baer has more guts than Schmeling he can win the fight. Which is just another way of saying that the boy with the most fighting guts will get himself talked about at Babe Ruth's home baseball park on June 8.

HARVARD NINE SLIPS IN E. L.

By Associated Press

Unexpected disaster in the form of a double shutout by Cornell at Cambridge reduced the Harvard baseball team from the status of a championship contender in the Eastern Inter-Collegiate League to just another team trying to remain within the first division.

Coupled with a 5 to 2 defeat by Dartmouth at Hanover last Wednesday, this double reverse dropped Harvard into a tie with Dartmouth for third place where each of the claimants has a record of four won and four lost.

Yale has won six and lost two and can finish half a game ahead of Columbia by scoring straight-game triumphs against Princeton and Harvard.

Wonder if Ranny Weeks is serious about heading for Chicago to follow up certain bids for his baritoning, as reported going the radio rounds there? . . . Herbert Marsh feels good about folks telling him his Cascades Roof music (WBZ) making sounds a lot like Guy Lombardo dance rhythm, which it does . . . George Givot, the "Ambassador from Athens," relaxes backstage at the Metropolitan Theater and tells one about two restaurant proprietors having fisticuffs over alleged slanderous remarks concerning their respective eating place. George quickly disposes of the incident as a case of "Greek beating Greek" . . . That "See Your Grocer Today" suggestion should be taken out of Sunday foodstuff announcements . . . Hub theater bosses wouldn't do box office receipts a bad turn by booking a local vocal lad named Francis Riley, who renders a baritone solo not at all unlike the renowned John Charles Thomas . . . No truth in WHDH being for sale, apparently . . . Ruth Moss, former WHDH voice personality is now secretary to program planner John Clark at WBZ offices . . . Linus Travers taking firmer hold at the Yankee Network studio helm and WNAC-WAAB staffers like it . . . Harmony boys, "Ronnie and Van," now in New York scouting network work for themselves . . . Your Uncle N. F. T. thinks "Two Beers and a Pretzel" a timely trio label for some three originality-seeking air entertainers. One "light," one "dark" and the third a little twisted—eh? Several such ideas sprouted over the week-end.

Thrilling Romance of Hollywood Today

"Anything wrong, Mr. Cavanaugh?"

"Get me headquarters, please!"

His call was passed mechanically from operator to operator, from desk sergeant back to the telephone room at headquarters and finally plugged in on the private line that led to Detective Mulrooney's home.

"I'm giving you a break, Mulrooney," said Cavanaugh grimly. "A woman has just been shot and killed in my apartment. You better beat it over here as fast as you can. If you hurry you'll be the first one on the scene."

Mulrooney wasted no time asking questions beyond an inquiry asking Cavanaugh's address.

Cavanaugh went back to the living room and sat down. Overcoming all his feelings, he forced himself to touch Annette' forehead. It was beginning, definitely, to be cold.

Tomorrow the whole thing would be in the newspapers. A woman had been shot dead in his apartment in the early morning. It was not suicide—it was murder.

It was the kind of disgrace that would follow a man t his grave. Nine-tenths of his life was wrecked right now. A man mixed up in a thing like this could never explain it away. It stamped him with a mark that would be visible and indelible forever.

It was the end of Lucky's luck.

Undoubtedly he would be arrested. Perhaps he would go to trial and conceivably he would be convicted.

He got up and began to look around the room for a revolver. It was useless because no such weapon was there. The telephone rang gently. It was the clerk on the switchboard downstairs speaking.

"I heard your talk to that policeman, Mr. Cavanaugh. Did I understand you to say somebody had been killed——"

"No, you misunderstood me," Cavanaugh said abruptly and hung up.

FROM OUTSIDE

What had happened began to piece itself together in his mind. A shot had come from outside the room—very probably through the open window. People had been crying that they saw a man on the fire-escape and heard him shoot.

There was only one consolation in the whole terrible business. Leni was no longer in jeopardy from the half-mad jealousy of the other woman. There would be no more talk of vitrol.

All the same, he would have to face the probability that never again would Leni Luneska look upon him as before. Between them forever would be the dead body of a murdered woman—a symbol of infidelity. The facts would speak for themselves.

He bent forward in his chair, resting his face in his hands. Other men before him had stumbled into this darkness—the tragic legion of men who had lost their luck. He had seen them, furtive, shabby, drifting around the edges of their former triumphs.

He could picture himself haggard faced, unkempt, shunned, a creature of the back alleys and murky places. His whole life had been founded on luck. He opened his eyes and looked at Annette's body. Her cold clay was the answer to everything.

Very slowly and comfortably Leni came back to wakefulness in her bed. Oddly enough she had slept soundly until almost noon. For a while she did not open her eyes because she wanted to prolong the exquisite sensation of being in love.

Like many women who know much of life, Leni knew almost nothing of love. No one would believe this, but as she emerged from slumber she was as delighted with life as a school girl who has found h first sweetheart

Only when she was fully awake did she recall the stark and brutalized elements of her life.

Even the Holy Grail of stardom—of glittering motion picture success—bore down upon her with brushing weight. The death of Kruger—the threatened exposure of her past—the threats and demands of the czaristic detective Mulrooney—all of these were like black beasts trying to tear her to pieces.

The sweet and rose colored glow of her love dreams began to cool off.

LIKE A QUEEN

Presently she would arise and feel her success squeezing painfully into her tender flesh like heavy iron fetters. The anguish of last night would be with her again.

The door of the bedroom opened and her personal maid, Celeste, came in bearing a silver tray with hot coffee and a dish of cold sliced peaches.

"It's time for madame to be awake," said Celeste with a tinge of authority. "The day is half gone and we are being swamped with telegrams of congratulations."

There was a stack of yellow envelopes from people who had seen the premiere of Leni' picture. These were the first fruits of success. These telegrams were only the beginning.

From now on she would live in the world worshipped almost as a queen. She was young, rich, beautiful. Money, love, admiration was ready to pour upon her in a golden shower.

Men would follow her, pursue her, lay their life and love at her feet. She could have anything and anybody she desired. She could be a marchesa or a countess if it pleased her whim.

Life was no longer a golden dream. It was a dizzy reality spangled with the rarest jewels the earth afforded.

All of this Leni realized. She looked down upon the glittering panorama from an ethereal height. It was the nearest thing to earthly heaven a feminine mind could conceive.

"You can take those telegrams away, Celeste," she said, simply. "I'm not interested."

"Don't bother, please. If anyone phones I'm not at home, except to Mr. Cavanaugh."

"But the studio, madame! They have 'phoned four times already this morning."

Leni permitted herself a small smile of satisfaction. The monumental studio's control of her destiny had lost, at last, its arbitrary power of command. The shoe now was on the other foot.

"You may go now, Celeste."

"Shall I leave the morning paper?"

"Yes, I'd like to see what they say about the picture," said Leni, almost indifferently.

The dark-eyed French girl placed the morning Examiner, still folded, upon the table beside the bed. Leni had always been incomprehensible to her, now more so than ever. To accept success so calmly seemed to Celeste to border upon weak-mindedness.

The coffee brought a gracious and stimulating warmth to Leni. A delightful sense of freedom was playing around her heart.

The tearing anguish of the night before had changed to meek and simple contentment. The gratification of her ambition had nothing to do with it. Ambition success had melted away like the dross they really were.

A new emotion, as clear and beautiful as the ringing of a silver bell was sounding throughout her whole being. She was no longer a slave. She had been wretched and lonely and hard-driven all of her life.

She had passed into a new existence. She had found love. All else was obliterated.

The beauty of it was that she was under no compulsion whatever. She could drop everything—fame, studio, wealth—as easily as discarding a worn-out frock.

Down Memory Lane!

(With Ernest Truex)

Of course I don't remember it, but the first of my family arrived in what was New Amsterdam about 1608—the name at that time was Dutrieux. They were Walloons from the south of Belgium. Old Philip Dutrieux had a farm on Maiden Lane, but desiring more ground for his vegetables, he left Maiden Lane, and founded what is now Schenectady, and I suppose that is the main reason I am on the stage. If he had stayed put in Maiden Lane I would probably now be one of the scions of a wealthy family.

Now we skip to Rich Hill, Mo., a couple of hundred years later. My father, Dr. Truex, has a patient, an old-time actor—in fact, one of the original grave diggers with Booth and Barrett in "Hamlet." The old actor is stranded in the small town and, wishing to repay my father for his treatment, he starts training little Ernest, aged 5, for the stage. The first part is "Hamlet," which, after a few months of preparation, we played on the stage of the Rich Hill, Mo., Opera House. According to the local press, a great tragedian flashed upon the public. Then followed a barn-storming tour throughout the Middle West in a repertoire of Shakespearian plays.

Ernest is now 8 years old. Mr. Woodward asked him what experience he had and when he said "Hamlet," "Richard III," etc., Mr. Woodward laughed heartily, causing the young tragedian to walk out of his office. Then Mr. Woodward sent for him a few days later and gave him the part of little Aulus in "Quo Vadis" and that was my first part in a real play. They put me to dress with the extra girls, much to my chagrin at that time, but after the opening night Mr. Woodward put me into his star dressing room and the critics had discovered the child wonder. After several seasons with this company, playing the entire range of boy parts, I moved to Denver, Col., and there joined the Bellows Stock Company at Elitches Gardens.

A little schooling was sandwiched in between all these roles, and at this time it was the East Denver high school. I remember Douglas Fairbanks was a pupil also Harold Lloyd, Robert Z. Leonard, the picture director, and Paul Whiteman. Mr. Fairbanks also joined the Bellows Stock Company and we played in many plays there together.

Then New York at 17—a boarding house where one of the big picture theaters now stands. Much gazing at electric signs, and wondering if some day, perhaps, my name would be there. A futile search for a part in a play. Finally, to keep body and soul together, taking a job making change in a penny arcade at 14th st., run by Adolph Zukor, and Marcus Loew barking for a five-cent picture theater above it. At last, a part in a play. It was with Mary Shaw in "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire," on the road, of course. Then with the famous old comedian, Ezra Kendall, playing the juvenile lead—only kept because Mr. Kendall said it made him laugh when he thought of me as his leading man.

While on this tour in Toronto, Canada, I went to a local race track and was introduced there to Lillian Russell, who thought I was a jockey. When I informed her that I was an actor she made a mental note of it, and some months later I was offered the part of the jockey in a racing play called "Wild Fire" with Miss Russell. That was my first New York appearance.

BOOKS---A Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

Back in the days when I was with the Butterick Co., I remember the late Mabel Potter Daggett, one of our special writers, coming to me with excitement in her eyes and saying:

"Look out for a new young writer named Edna Ferber. Everybody's has just taken a short story of hers and I've read the manuscript. It's a wonder. Edna Ferber will be heard from."

The story was "The Homely Heroine." It fetched the regular rate of those days—2 cents a word, and the check sent the author (then in Appleton, Wis.) was for the magnificent sum of $67.50.

During the war, at some sort of benefit, I heard Edna Ferber read this story aloud from the historic platform of Plymouth Church in Brooklyn. We had realized by that time, what a new and vital force had come to American literature; for we had the Emma McChesney stories, and one novel, "Dawn O'Hara," had appeared.

The sharp, crisp, scintillating style was known to all magazine readers, and when, in the merry-go-round of editorial service, I moved over to McClure's, I was determined that Edna Ferber's work should enrich our pages. She sent us several little masterpieces, and I can recall leaping from my seat at my desk when I first read such tales of hers as "The Eldest" and "The Maternal Feminine," with their surprise endings. There are certain experiences in the business of editing which one never forgets.

But brilliant as were Miss Ferber's achievements in the restricted form of the short story, we all wondered if she had it in her to sustain a mood long enough to create a novel; for certainly, sooner or later, she would attempt a longer piece of work. ("Dawn O'Hara" had been but a girlish rehearsal.) She herself has told me how she once had a contract sent to her, about this time, for as many Emma McChesney stories as she could produce, with the price to be filled in by herself. She sent it back, unsigned; for she was wise enough to see if she thus tied herself down she was done for as an artist.

A novel was forming in the back of her head; and already she had written at least thirty McChesney stories—enough, she said to her conscience. Then we got "The Girls"—still, to my mind, one of her most penetrating novels, a skilfully conceived story of three generations in Chicago. That was followed by such rich books as "So Big," "Show Boat," "Cimarron" and "American Beauty"—any one of which was enough to prove her right to the foremost place she now occupies in American letters.

• • •

But sandwiched in between these significant volumes there were collections of short stories—seven in all. Now we have the eighth, and in many ways the best from her prolific pen. It is called "They Brought Their Women," and Doubleday-Doran have made a beautiful thing of it, in keeping with the high quality of the contents; and Miss Ferber has written a preface which is somewhat in the nature of an apologia. For she sees things moving so swiftly that, as she truly says:

"You need only stand looking out of your window to see the world changing before your eyes."

Therefore she has dated each of the eight tales comprising this volume, lest the reader whisper, "But this theme is old-fashioned." Yet I hardly think Miss Ferber was called upon thus to remind us of the breathless haste at which we go. Her stories are timeless. They might have been finished, it is true, last night, or a decade ago; but they would retain the spirit of the moment in which they were conceived. Her art requires no explanation.

Her French husband still exists; her lonely girl, drifting about New York on a quiet Sunday this year, will be doing the same thing ten, fifteen, twenty years from now; and the glamorous star on Broadway who craves the solitude of her home above the applause of the crowd, will go on having the same human desires.

This is the America of yesterday, today and tomorrow. How fortunate we are to have Miss Ferber as an authentic interpreter of our rapidly sifting scene. She knows us all, and in a single vivid phrase she can say more than most novelists utter in a hundred thousand words.

Etiquette of the Party

(From Gaskell's Compendium of Soulterns, 1880)

SOIREES comprise conversazioni, matinees, teas, matinees, croquet, berrying, nutting and outdoor frolicks. Conversaziones call for two round display of curiosities, photographs and stereoscopes, laid out gracefully on tables, and ottomans and divans conveniently placed. The hostess may play piano and should be led to it by a gentleman. Should the evening prove stormy there should be someone with umbrella at the door. Distinction is considered more beauty. If a guest play the piano he should not comment on the instrument, even if it be shockingly out of tune.

The matinee requires good grounds, a good band and company comprising the best-dressed people, for dress is everything on these occasions. In addition to a good cornet band, the club should sing between selections. Guests disperse before dark. Any cold collation may be served.

Croquet is very fashionable at 3 p. m. Grads must be well shaded, and seats scattered about for non-players.

At berrying and nutting parties a guest should allow himself to be amused and enter heart and soul in it and endeavor by every means in his power to add to the general hilarity. Etiette may be set at naught; yet the true gentleman or lady will not leave politeness at home. On fishing parties gentlemen will bait the hooks for fair anglers and assist them in landing the "finny" prey. While nutting, the gentleman will climb and shake the trees. Couple should avoid straying too far and staying too long from companion.

Here Is the New Railroad Train—Speed 110 Miles an Hour

This Means Beginning of Fast Travel by Rail

The late E. H. Harriman, head of the Union Pacific, rebuilt that road and made it one of the most magnificent railroads in the United States, incidentally conquering the Salton Sea, among other obstacles. It is a pity that Mr. Harriman, truly great railroad man, could not be here to see the new train that his son, William Averell Harriman, will soon start running on the Union Pacific system.

Editorials here frequently have called attention to the fact that the way for railroads to meet competition with cheap, fast automobile and motor bus transportation is to MEET THE COMPETITION, not merely TALK about it. In this train the Union Pacific is taking the first step toward real SURFACE RAPID TRANSIT.

The train pictured here will be made up of three cars, forming a single unit like a creeping caterpillar, and streamlined, so that there will be an absolute minimum of air resistance. The train will be made of a light metal, an aluminum alloy, as strong as ordinary steel and one-third the weight, or of a so-called "rustless" steel, three times as strong as ordinary steel, and, therefore, requiring only one-third the weight.

The average speed planned for this train will be ninety miles an hour, with 110 miles on straight runs. It could take passengers from the Atlantic to the Pacific in about thirty hours.

The entire train, carrying 106 passengers in addition to the crew, a mail car and eating department for passengers, will weigh only as much as one average heavy Pullman car that carries 20 passengers or fewer. In other words, in this "caterpillar" the same weight carries five times as many passengers, and at a REAL speed.

The Boston Evening American congratulates the Union Pacific and William Averell Harriman, who have pushed this enterprise to completion, and to all that will be associated with him in the production of this light, high speed train, particularly Mr. Crawford, the president of the Pullman Company; Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Company; Mr. Stout, the aeronautical engineer, and other able, progressive men.

The country needs fast surface transportation, and will have it. The railroads will find that their rights of way carrying passengers at high speed and for lower fare, will restore the value of railroad properties, and easily meet, to the public's advantage, the competition of motor buses and automobiles.

And all that means PROGRESS.

A Wreath, A Prayer

Memorial Day—Your Country and YOU and the Future

You will lay a wreath tomorrow on the altar of American patriotism.

It will be Memorial Day.

War has come in every generation.

Five times since the American Revolution, the men of America have been called to the colors of their country and the tramp of American soldiery has "rung throughout the land."

We sincerely hope we have seen the last one.

You will offer your fervent prayers at the graves of your relatives and friends for their eternal repose.

You will pray for the era of peace on earth among men of good will.

Say a prayer, too, that if war inevitably does come, your country will be patriotically defended again; that it will remain secure against the onslaughts of foreign foe.

Express the hope that Divine Providence will give your country the intelligence to keep free from the dangerous political alliances and foreign pacts that can involve it in the rivalries, jealousies and troubles of the world.

Just Folks

Memorial Day

Now in these troubled days once more
Unto our glorious dead we come!
Stilled are the bugle and the drum
And stilled the hateful cannon's roar.
For us they died!
Be ours the pride
Of steadfastness when shadows fall.
Let us be worthy of them all!

Flowers on their graves and flags to wave
But little mean when storms assail
And dangers threaten, if we fail
To be as brave as they were brave.
Each silent mound
Of holy ground
Green gleaming 'neath the sun of May
Bids us to be as strong as they.

What is remembrance? Just a thought,
A blossom or a falling tear
On one brief morning of the year;
Or is it something finer, caught
From hero lives
Which long survives
To hearten, strengthen and inspire
When hearts grow faint and bodies tire?

Let us our pledge of faith renew!
Once more the call to duty sounds,
Beside our hallowed hero mounds.
Let us remember to be true
And face our task
As they would ask.
Against the perils of the day
Let us be warriors—such as they!

This is how it happened. I placed a $10 bill in my hand to pay for movie tickets. Someone in the car on the way handed me a stick of chewing gum and, removing the paper, I tucked it in the hand with the bill. Then at an opportune moment tossed the wad including the bill out the window to the street. A few blocks later I discovered the loss, screamed, swooned, circled back slowly for a futile search. And unless you have thrown a $10 bill away you'll never know the anguish.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"Seek the Highest"

THAT TWO-FISTED human fighting for America in Washington—you've got to hand it to him.

Whatever you may think of his political party, he's proving himself a 100 per cent Man. And that isn't merely because he's working hard and putting out some mighty good ideas. It's proven, even more, by the fact that he admits he can blunder as well as succeed.

Elsie Robinson

It takes a big person—a very big person—to admit he can, and sometimes does, blunder.' And the greater a leader's strength, the harder it is to make such an admission—the bigger his soul if he does make it.

Franklin Roosevelt's soul is that big. He can take it as well as dish it out. As he took it in that May 7th radio speech. Remember?

"I DO NOT DENY," said he, "THAT WE MAY MAKE MISTAKES—I HAVE NO EXPECTATION OF MAKING A HIT EVERY TIME I COME TO BAT—WHAT I SEEK IS THE HIGHEST POSSIBLE BATTING AVERAGE."

The highest possible batting average. That's a good goal for any life. But it takes a brave spirit to accept that as a goal.

IF WE CAN'T HAVE A PERFECT SCORE, WE DON'T WANT TO PLAY AT ALL!

IT'S BECAUSE WE CAN'T STAND THE STING OF IMPERFECTION.

It's such fun and so comfortable to be in the right. It takes very little spine to sustain success—which is the main reason why most successful people speedily lose whatever spine they have.

But it isn't fun to be in the wrong. No matter how noble the motive, failure is always a pain in the neck. Maybe God knows you did your darnedest. But to the proletariat you're just another flop—and that's mighty hard to take. So very, very hard, that most of us won't take it. Instead, we will tell any lie, commit any shabby trick, to escape criticism.

But no life can ever be strong or useful or worthy of confidence that doesn't risk mistakes, make mistakes, admit mistakes.

How large is your spirit?

It's as large as your own willingness to admit that failure after it's made.

"But there are people who never seem to make mistakes."

There are, indeed. There are also Contented Cows. If that's your notion of an ideal human destiny join the longhorns, stranger. But if you really wish to make good in a big human way—if you wish to appreciate big humanity in the other person—learn to make and learn to take mistakes.

Take a chance with yourself! Make a fool of yourself! Admit it, like a sport! Then go ahead to the next adventure!

There's the creed of a Big Modern. There's the creed of that man sitting in the White House — and he's living it through, down to the last game grin!

I saw that man as he came flying through to the Chicago convention —sat within a few feet of him as he spoke in asknowledgment of his nomination. Bucking the clouds—that was no new stunt for him. Many a cloud had he bucked in those terrible months of paralysis. And the mark was on him still. Steel clamps around his instep—

BUT NO STEEL CLAMPS ON HIS SOUL!

That man's soul could stand on its own—and with one look, you knew it. He loved life—and he would risk it. He had spunk—and he would use it. He would use it wrong, sometimes—

BUT HE WASN'T AFRAID TO BE IN THE WRONG.

THE HUMAN SIDE OF THE NEWS

Japan---Just a Tiger Loose in the World Sheepfold

By EDWIN C. HILL

Japan storms through the great wall and drives on to the capture of Peiping and the conquest of North China. Her disciplined legions, fired by national pride, are completing the greatest military venture of modern times. A tiger loose in a sheep-fold. For that is what pacifist China is today, the sheep-fold of the world, the most arresting and utterly convincing example of what pacifism can do to humiliate, degrade and shatter a once great nation.

EDWIN C. HILL

Peace, world peace, is the grandest of human conceptions, but it is difficult to see how that conception has been practically advanced by all of the Genevas and the Washington conferences and the Locarnos that have dreamed their dreams and flooded the world with lovely language ever since the guns ceased thundering on the western front. For we are living, as it happens, in a world of hard realities and not in a world of pink-tinged dreams. We are living in a dislocated, changing world, where whole races, as well as individual nations, are seeking a readjustment demanded by implacable necessity.

Need for Space Forces Japs to Fight

Japan needs new territory in Asia to accommodate her crowded millions. She is taking it, ruthlessly and relentlessly, scornful of the impotent League of Nations and of all protests and pressure from the great capitals of the West. The nation that tries to halt her march of conquest is the nation that will have to fight her.

We certainly do not want to see the Stars and Stripes in battle array against the red sun flag of Nippon, but the person who dreamily assumes that there is no existing menace of war between the United States and Japan ignores the explosive character of incidents that might occur at any moment between the victory-excited Japanese and our own American infantry and marines now in Peiping and adjacent territory. For more than 30 years burning resentment against the United States and our racial exclusion policy has seethed under the smooth overlay of Japanese politeness and diplomatic expressions. Resentment against our blunt distaste for the yellow race. Resentment against the incessant scoldings from Washington in the previous administration.

That smooth overlay has pretty well been discarded of late. Anti-American parades in the streets of Japanese cities and violent denunciations of the American attitude toward Japan's invasion of China have taken its place. In plain English, a situation has been created which might as a spark at a single blow bring on a war which no one wants.

Navy Key to Security of Japan

Our danger lies in the powerful and aggressive navy of Japan, from the Japan which has been steadily provoked and irritated by our dumb and dangerous habit of interfering in matters which are none of our concern. We scolded and hectored Japan about her aggressions in Manchuria and took the haughty stand that never, never would we countenance her seizure of Manchuria. Well, I don't think that Manchuria is any of our business. I think we have brought the Japanese from irritation to hot resentment, and finally to cold anger, the kind of mood out of which war springs so easily.

The penalty for trying to protect a broken and disorganized China may very aptly be a war to protect California and our Pacific coast. There is very little question but that the navy takes that point of view. Otherwise why should our entire naval strength have been taken from the Atlantic and concentrated in the Pacific?

The truth is, Japan has taken the bit in her teeth. She has launched a Napoleonic adventure. She had drawn cards and staked her future on the most desperate gamble of modern times. She is determined to stand or fall on her success in building a new empire in the heart of Asia. She has speed, guns, intrepidity, leadership, and an absolutely fatalistic confidence in victory. A million Japanese soldiers and sailors—two million—would die with shouts of joy, if their dying could ensure greater glory for their emperor and greater power for their country.

* * *

A short time ago a cablegram from Tokio showed the spirit which fires Japanese soldiers. Sub-Lieut. Jinroku Nishio had been taken prisoner by the Chinese. His capture was unavoidable and his surrender was honorable. But in the Japanese point of view he was a disgraced man. And so, when he was released, he opened an artery with his sword and died, a self-imposed penalty for his disgrace.

This incident reveals the indomitable resolution of a people who consider surrender or defeat a disgrace to be wiped out only by death. You don't find that spirit in pacificistic China and that is why the Chinese hordes have been crushed or swept aside by the Japanese military machine. I don't think for a moment that Japan could whip the United States in war (though it is plain that the Japanese think so). I think Japan would lose in the long run. But there will be hell along the Pacific coast if war comes, with our shrunken and depleted navy.

The danger of a world war is probably more acute today than it ever seemed before the fatal shot was fired at Sarajevo. The day may come—and come soon—when the American people, contemplating the stripped bones of navy, army and marine corps, will remember the words of Balaam's ass: The Lord opened the mouth of the ass, and she said unto Balaam, "What have I done unto thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times."
